War Summary of The Latest Events

While no declaration of war has been made, the Allies are actually at war with King Constantine and that part of the Greek people which continues to submit to his autocratic rule. Despatches from Berlin, which is once more in close touch with Athens by wireless, announce that a battle is in progress north of the Greek town of Katerina, on the west shore of the Gulf of Saloniki, between Greek regular troops and the French, who recently occupied Katerina with the object of preventing a clash between the troops of Venizelos and the Royalists. The town, it is further stated, has been captured by the Greeks, who numbered 5,000. Recent despatches from German sources stated that the Greek army was well provided with munitions, and in the event of a rupture of diplomatic relations with the Allies would attack the rear of General Sarraill's army of Monastir. That attack is evidently about to be launched.

The leaders of the Greek army have been openly in sympathy with Germany since the outbreak of the war. If they can carry the rank and file with them Greece will be able to put about 200,000 men into Thessaly for a life-and-death struggle with the Allies. The holding of Monastir under these conditions will be a difficult task, for the moment Constantine throws off the mask and wages open war on the Franco-British army Germany will assuredly reinforce the German-Bulgarian army of Macedonia and attack Sarraill from the north while the Greeks assail his rear and left flank.

Nor is that the only danger to which the Allies will be subjected in the Southern Balkans as a result of Greek Royalist hostility. The Italian army based on Avlona has advanced easterly from the Adriatic toward Monastir, and has thus interposed a barrier between the Greeks and the Austrians and Albanians, who side with Austria. The Italian line is thin, and the territory to be held and garrisoned is extensive. It is reported from Sofia that 6,000 Albanians have defeated a body of Italian troops near Resnesino, in Northern Epirus, putting them to flight. There are important Greek forces on the borders of Epirus who recently retired from Southern Albania under Italian pressure. A declaration of war would let them loose upon the Italians who are by no means strong enough to maintain a battle-front across Albania from Avlona northeast to the point of junction with Sarraill's army near

A declaration of war would let them loose upon the Italians who are by no means strong enough to maintain a battle-front across Albania from Avlona northeast to the point of junction with Sarraï's army near Lake Ochrida. The Italian lines once broken, the Austrians in Northern Albania could supply Greece with all the needed war material for a campaign in Thessaly.

The threatening peril can be avoided only by the utmost promptness of offensive action by General Sarraï using both the army of Saloniki and the sea power of the Allies. Further negotiations with King Constantine and the Cabinet, which speaks for him rather than for the Greek people, will be regarded, and rightly regarded, as a sign of fatal weakness on the part of the Allies. If the treacherous attack upon the French landing parties in Athens two weeks ago has been followed up by a pitched battle at

FOR BELGIAN CHILDREN

THE GIBBARD FURNITURE CO. GIVE
THE USE OF THEIR ROOMS TO THE DAUGHTERS OF EMPIRE.

On Thursday afternoon the U. E. L.
Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire gave an afternoon tea for the benefit of the starving children of Belgium. The Gibbard Furniture Co.
very generously placed their large furniture warerooms at the disposal of the ladies for the occasion.

The warerooms were beautifully decorated for the occasion and many of the guests were shown through to look over and admire the large stock of handsome furniture on view. The guests were surprised to find so large and varied an assortment of beautiful goods, as fine as could be found in any city wareroom.
The Gibbard Company have an exceptionally fine line of fancy chairs, tables and desks and at prices in many cases less than the same goods could be purchased from mail order houses, and prices which are in easy reach of everyone. A line of Chesterfields drew many admiring comments.
These goods are not usually carried in such number in the town ware-rooms and one would have to go to a city to see as complete a line.
Prices are from $50 to $75, at least 20 per cent. below city prices. They have also a nice range of the popular Davenport beds which Mr. Gibbard informs us are having a large sale and of which the Gibbard Co., carry a large stock. Evidently the Gibbard Company do not propose to be outclassed by any and Mr. Gibbard informs us that the public are beginning to appreciate the fact that not only is there a complete line of goods to choose from, which is certainly a decided advantage over a catalogue, but in the Gibbard Furniture Co., Napanee possesses a firm always willing and able to meet competition from any quarter, and can quote prices as low or lower than any firm in the Dominion.

Prospective purchasers of furniture should certainly visit the Gibbard warerooms and closely inspect their goods, before sending their money out of town. The Gibbard Company pay freight to your nearest railway station should you live out of town, or place it in your home if you live in town.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

Winnipeg, Dec. 11.—Wheat closed 2½c lower for December, and 1½c down for
May. Oats were down 2½c for May.
Barley was 3c lower for December, and 1½c down for May. Flax dropped 1c in December and 2c in May. The prospects of the Greek Government's wheat being thrown on the market today to be sold had a bearish tendency, but this was offset by the large decreases of nearly three million in the American visible supply. The local market was stubbornly firm until the last minutes, when the decline was greater than in the American markets. December was the weaker month owing to the weak cash market.

Cash premiums dropped from 2c to 3c for Nos. 1 and 2. Cash demand was fair. Oats and flax were in good demand.

FATAL FACTORY FIRE.

Many Lives Lost When Peterboro Mills Burned.

PETERBORO, Ont., Dec. 12.—Sixteen persons are believed to have lost their lives, while fifteen others were injured or burned, five of them seriously, in a fire which, following an explosion at 10.30 a.m. Monday, destroyed the plant of the Quaker Oats Company and a portion of the court house here. One victim was killed instantly, three died in the hospital, while twelve others are missing.

The known dead are Edwin How-ley, killed by explosion; Vincent Fornello, Dominick Martino, and Fred Holden, who died on reaching the hospital.

The missing are: William Lesley,
James W. Gordon, James Foster,
Ernest Staunton, Denis O'Brien, Alexander McGee, William Hokan, Thomas Parsons, William Miles, Daniel Nichols, John Conway, and Wilbert Kemp.

The badly injured or burned are:
R. Healy, fractured skull; J. Houli-han, not expected to live; J. W. Tetreau, badly burned, and C. Nicola, badly burned.

A statement from a semi-official source brings out the information that the buildings and stock were valued at $1,600,000.

The extent of the loss in goods has not been estimated, but it is stated that there were 400 carloads of case goods ready for shipment. The mill had been running at high pressure, day and night, since the beginning of the war. It is said the loss is covered by insurance. It was the large-est mill of its kind in Canada. The army of employees counted up about four or five hundred, and the wonder is that not more were killed or injured. The noise of the explosion doubtless acted as an alarm, and the employees immediately poured out of every exit in the building. Men staggered dazed, and several were seen rushing out wrapped in flames.
Girls were weeping in hysterics.
Doctors, nurses, policemen, and others were on hand to render first-aid, and there was no delay in getting the injured to the hospital.

WAR COUNCIL FORMED

Radical Change in the New British Cabinet.

The Premier, Lord Milner, Earl Curzon, Bonar Law, and David Henderson Form a Unique Council Which Will Possess Extraordinary Powers Until the Allies are Victorious.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The official list of the new Ministry issued Sunday night follows the unofficial forecasts with two or three minor changes. Mr. Lloyd George, Lord Milner, Earl Curzon, Andrew Bonar Law, and Arthur Henderson form what is officially termed the War Cabinet, while the others, who ordinarily have been designated as Cabinet Ministers, are called heads of departments.

An important point in this novel organization is that it concentrates far more power in the hands of the Prime Minister than the British system has ever known before. Mr.
Lloyd George's proposals to Premier Asquith were for a War Council, of which the Premier should not be a member, although he should have the power of passing on its work.
Mr. Lloyd George has not hesitated to place himself in a position more closely resembling a dictatorship than he was willing to give his predecessor.

The War Cabinet will hold daily sessions, directing the prosecution of the war, and the freedom of Mr.
Lloyd George, Lord Milner, and Mr.
Henderson from departmental duties will allow them to devote all their time to the War Council. The work of the Exchequer and the Government leadership in the House of Commons will absorb most of Mr.
Bonar Law's time, and attendance on the House of Lords will necessitate Earl Curzon's absence from the council frequently. So that, Mr.
Lloyd George, Lord Milner, and Mr.
Henderson will be the chief directors of the war.

For practical purposes the Government will be by a Cabinet of four. Whether there is any plan for meetings of all the heads of departments of Cabinet rank is not known yet, but councils in which the Ministers of Foreign Affairs, War, and the Admiralty participate with the others whose duties directly concern war measures will be certain.

ernment is 12 Liberals, 15 Unionists,

Veteran Railwayman Dead.

TORONTO, Dec. 12.—Robt. Kerr, one of the veterans of the railway service of Canada, passed away at his home, 69 Madison avenue, Saturday morning. Since 1910 the late Mr. Kerr had been on the retired list, but previous to that, dating back to 1866, when he joined the Northern, he had served continuously in one post after another. After twenty years of service with the old Northern Railway he accepted a post with the Canadian Pacific, and became general freight and passenger agent of the western lines. Later he became passenger and traffic manager of the western lines, with headquarters at Winnipeg.

At Yorkton a vote of 10 to 1 was piled up for abolition of government dispensaries, the figures being 687 for and 68 against.

Tried by Wolves.

PORT ARTHUR, Can. Dec. 12.—Punished by a pack of fifty ferocious timber wolves, Messrs. J. Green, a timber contractor, and J. Merrifield of Port Arthur, who were timber cruising on one of Mr. Green's limits in the Dog Lake district, were compelled to spend last Thursday night in a tree in order to escape the wolves. They were crossing the ice on Hawk Bay, about fifty miles from Port Arthur, about dusk, when the wolves appeared over the brow of a hill and gave chase to them, compelling them to seek safety in a tree near the edge of the lake. After remaining beneath the tree for ten hours the wolves moved away at dawn, and allowed the men, who were numbed and stiffened as a result of exposure, to proceed to their camp. They arrived in the city Monday morning, and stated that the wolves appeared to be fiercer this year than they have ever been before, as this is very early in the season for an incident of this nature. Old-timers opine that there must be a scarcity of the game upon which these animals prey, and that the wolves will be a source of much danger during the winter.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—A heavily armed steamship, fitted with torpedo tubes, has been sighted about 500 miles north of the Azores in the middle of the steamship lane, according to a wireless warning flashed Sunday night to merchant vessels of the Entente allies by a British or French cruiser lying off Sandy Hook.

The message, which was sent first in English and then repeated in Italian, said:

"Sighted 7 a.m., December 4, longitude 48.45 west, latitude 27.57 north, a steamer of about 4,000 tons, 350 feet long and 45 feet beam. Vessel well armed and fitted with torpedo tubes. Had one short, broad funnel, and two masts. Steamer probably high speed. Take all precautions."

LEGAL ROMANCES.

Court Cases Where the Unexpected Came as a Climax.

FACTS THAT RIVAL FICTION.

Some Trials In Which the Heavy Hand of the Law Was Curiously Turned Aside From Inflicting Punishment Upon an Innocent Person.

As a rule, law proceedings are dry affairs, but there have been some wherein the facts rivaled the most romantic fiction.

About the middle of the eighteenth century a vessel arrived one day at an English port from India. The captain reported that, while sailing through the Indian ocean, one of his passengers, a man of wealth and rank, had been murdered and then accused one of his passengers, a young brother of the murdered man, of the crime.

Though protesting his innocence, the accused was brought to trial. When put upon the stand the captain swore that about midnight on the evening of the murder, which was Christmas eve, he had seen the accused leave his own cabin, creep stealthily along the deck to the cabin of his brother and there enter. Shortly after, the captain testified, he heard the sounds of a struggle and then saw the accused emerge and return to his cabin. On going to the cabin of the elder brother he found him dead from strangulation. Under cross examination the captain said that he, himself, was concealed from the view of the accused man by the deep shadow cast by the sail in the light of a full moon, while the accused had been compelled to creep in the light for quite a distance, which rendered him perfectly recognizable. The second mate, who testified that he was with the captain, swore to the same facts.

There was no other evidence except the denial of the accused, who, it was shown, would profit largely by his brother's death. Just as the case was about to be given to the jury a man in the courtroom asked permission to put a single question to the captain.

"Now," said the stranger when the captain had returned to the stand, "if you recognized the prisoner in the light of a full moon on last Christmas eve, how do you, who know something of astronomy, account for the fact that on last Christmas eve there occurred a total eclipse of the sun?"

Trapped thus in his own circumstantial lies, the captain broke down and confessed that he and the mate had been hired to commit the murder by a third relative, who, upon the death of the younger brother, would have fallen heir to both their estates.

In a celebrated court martial case which came up for trial in 1871 a young lieutenant was accused of having forged another man's name to a promissory note and obtained money on it. The accusing witness produced the note in question, which was written upon a sheet of blue ruled foolscap paper and bore a date of the year 1867.

Everything had gone against the defendant and the case was about to go to the jury when the prosecuting attorney

HATCHING OF BEES.

Their Method of Escape From the Wax Cells of the Hive.

It is interesting to watch young bees in the act of hatching out from the cells of the hive. The wax capping which confines them is thin, but it is quite strong enough to give the tender young bee a good deal of trouble in nibbling it through.

At first one can only see a part of the insect's head through a small hole it has made. It gradually nibbles away the wax till the hole is big enough for the entire head to get through, but ere this stage is reached the young bee has been assisted in its efforts by several of the older bees, who, though no doubt engaged in some other work, pause on their way and very considerably nibble away a little of the capping with their stronger jaws.

Once the head of the young bee is out of the cell it has much more power, and, after pulling and twisting perseveringly, the thorax is gradually worked free of its prison. Then the abdomen slips easily after it, and the birth of the bee is accomplished.

When they are free of the cells the young bees stand for some time palpitating and apparently getting their breath again after their efforts, while some of the nurse bees gently stroke them and give them food.—London Tit-Bits.

NATURE AS A SURGEON.

Some Species of Trees Amputate Their Limbs Regularly.

Nature in many instances is her own physician, treating her ills without consultation and rendering unto herself most excellent treatment. Healing always takes place without infection, and no great strain is put upon the tree itself. Her surgery is bloodless and, so far as we know, painless, writes David Brock in the Scientific American.

Take, for instance, some of the popular and willow trees. When the immediate environment is not adapted to the best growth of a twig or branch of these trees nature sets up a special cell formation, a corklike growth which gradually cuts off the nutrition from the part about to be eliminated. These abscess cells, as they are termed, form close up to the parent limb or trunk and encircle the part to be removed with such uniformity that little more plant tissue is involved than is really necessary.

When in the early spring a tree receives a great amount of nutrition numerous branches are sent out which later in the summer become shaded and of no value to the tree. It is then that the process of elimination takes place. These trees, as a rule, do not lose their branches until late summer.

Jumping Cocoons.

Many visitors to the southwestern states and Mexico have amused themselves by watching the queer motions of "jumping beans," the seed vessels of a plant, each of which contain the pupa of an insect whose spasmodic movements cause the bean to hop and roll about.

More remarkable are the "jumping cocoons" found in South Africa. The cocoon is formed by the mother in-

A NATURAL PUZZLE

One of the Great Mysteries That Confound Science.

THE FORCE OF GRAVITATION.

This Wonderful Power That Keeps Suns and Planets In Their Courses May Be Waves In the Ether That Push All Bodies Toward Each Other.

The mystery of mysteries in science is the attraction of gravitation—that very force of nature that is the most familiar to us all. It seems strange that the most familiar thing in the world should be at the same time the most inexplicable, but so it is.

In order to see clearly wherein the mystery consists let us first consider what gravitation appears to be. It is gravitation that gives the property of weight to all bodies. If there were no gravitation we could float in the air. It is gravitation that brings a cannon ball eventually to the earth, no matter how swiftly it may be projected. The faster it starts the farther it will go, but during every second of its flight it drops the same distance vertically toward the earth, whether the speed imparted to it by the powder is 500 or 3,000 feet per second. Gravitation acts on a moving body exactly as well as on one at rest.

It is gravitation that curbs the motion of the moon and keeps it in an orbit of which the earth is the active focus.

So, too, it is gravitation that governs the earth in its motion around the sun, preventing it from flying away into boundless space. Astronomy shows that gravitation acts between all the planets and all the stars and controls their motions with respect to one another.

Now, this mysterious force appears to be an attraction as if there were elastic cords connecting all the bodies in space and tending to draw them together. But space, as far as our senses can detect, is empty. How, then, can there be an attraction? In order that a body may be attracted or drawn there must be something to draw it. Gravitation does the trick, but completely hides from us the mechanism through which it acts. We can discover no mechanism at all.

When an unfortunate aeroplanist drops from his machine he begins at once to fall toward the earth as if it were pulling him. But how can it pull if it has nothing to pull with? You may think at first sight that it is the air which acts as an intermediary, but that is not so, because the earth and the moon "pull" upon one another with a force equal to the strength of a steel cable 500 miles in diameter, but there is no air and no other tangible thing in the open space, 240,000 miles across, that gaps between the moon and the earth.

Then gravitation exerts the same force at every instant. No matter how fast the falling aeronaut may be descending at any moment, gravitation will keep on adding speed as if he had just started. Disregarding the

THE LAST JUDGMENT

The clock of Beauvais cathedral said to be composed of 92,000 pieces. One sees on the fifty plates the hour, the day, the month; the rising and the sun, phases of the moon, the time in the principal of the world, together with a terrestrial and astronomical calendar.

The framework is carved meters by five meters, or ten feet by sixteen and a quarter.

When the clock strikes all life seems in movement. The wished to depict the last. This wonderful work recalls of Strassburg and is of construction. It is the work of a valian, M. Verite, who was engineering department of railway and who died in 1887.

PERSIA'S SORROWFUL

It Blooms Only at Night and Withered In Daytime

In faroff Persia there grows which is called the sorrow. Another name for this tree is jessamine or the sad tree. Why it is called the sad or tree is because it blooms only at night.

When the first star appears the first bud opens on the tree. As the evening the buds open more rapidly the tree is covered with a delicate and it appears like one in bloom. The bloom is quite fragrant odor is like the perfume of the primrose. As the stars begin to dim and the dawn approaches flowers begin to fade, and by the sun has risen not a flower found on the tree.

During the hours of daylight appears to be withering as been injured in some manner reality it is simply regaining in order to put new blossoms following night.

This tree is held in high the natives of the country grows and is looked upon as a deity by florists throughout. When cut down these tree sprouts from the roots that v into a flowering tree in a time.—Apples of Gold.

Macready's Caustic R

A scapegrace baron pawned onet he had worn at the coron Queen Victoria. Having a acquaintance with Macready, dian, he wrote to the actor sell the pawn ticket and that the redeemed item of property be an interesting "property." Macready reten upon a sheet of blue ruled foolscap paper and bore a date of the year 1867. Everything had gone against the defendant and the case was about to go to the jury, when the sweetheart of the lieutenant, who was sitting beside him at the trial, happened to pick up the note and hold it in such a way that a strong light from the window shone through the paper. There, to her joy, she read the watermark, "Swampscott Mills, 1869." In other words, the note purported to have been written on the paper two years before the paper had been manufactured.

The year 1869 figures in another strange lawsuit. In the year 1880 certain persons in New Mexico claimed a huge tract of hundreds of thousands of acres as the heirs of one Bartolomeo Baca, to whom, they alleged, the Spanish government had, in 1817, made a grant. They exhibited the deed of grant and sued to obtain possession. On the trial the deed of grant stood every test of genuineness, and a decree was entered awarding the immense property to the claimants.

Some months afterward as John Waldron, the attorney for the Santa Fe railroad, who had been the principal loser, was reading a paper his eye rested on this little paragraph, "Aniline ink was invented in 1869 in Germany." As he read the thought flashed through his mind, "What kind of ink was the Baca land grant written in?" By permission of the court he had a chemist make a quiet test of the ink of the grant, and when he read the chemist's report he cabled to a certain German chemist in Europe. Six months after, when the case was, by permission of the court, reopened on account of newly discovered evidence, a white bearded stranger took the stand and in ten minutes sent the case of the Baca heirs out of court and the heirs themselves into the penitentiary by swearing that he was the inventor of aniline ink, that the invention was made in 1869, and that the ink in which the Bartolomeo Baca grant, dated 1817, was written, was aniline.—Case and Comment.

The Mistake of His Life.

Bluffers—What's wrong today? You look blue.
Bluffers—I'll never forgive myself. I kicked a caller out of my house last night.
"Huh! I kicked many a one. Young fellow, I suppose?"
"No; past middle age."
"Well, these old codgers have no business coming round sparking young girls. I kicked out one of that sort last week."
"Yes, but I've found out that this man wasn't after my daughter. He was after my mother-in-law."

movements cause the bean to hop and roll about.

More remarkable are the "jumping cocoons" found in South Africa. The cocoon is formed by the mother insect and is very hard. The pupa when ready to emerge must cut its way out. The front of its head has a sharp, chisel-like edge, and by driving this against the inside of the shell it gradually makes a hole. The violent motions of the pupa within cause the cocoon to leap so that one has been seen to spring out of a small glass tumbler.

Carlyle Declined the Honor.

Among the many distinguished men who have refused honors was Thomas Carlyle. Disraeli offered him in the queen's name the Grand Cross of the Bath, "a distinction," writes Froude, "never before conferred upon any English author, with a life income corresponding to such rank." Carlyle declined the honor, but he was deeply touched by the compliment, the more so as he had frequently attacked Disraeli in his writings. Most readers will probably agree with the verdict of the Chelsea bus conductor who said to Froude: "Very proper of the queen to offer it and more proper of him to say that he would have nothing to do with it. 'Tisn't they who can do honor to the likes of he."—London Standard.

Over the Bridge of Sighs.

Nine times out of ten it is over the Bridge of Sighs that we pass the narrow gulf from youth to manhood. That interval is usually occupied by an ill placed or disappointed affection. We recover and we find ourselves new beings. The intellect has become hardened by the fire through which it has passed. The mind profits by the wrecks of every passion, and we may measure our road to wisdom by the sorrows we have undergone.—Bulwer-Lytton.

how fast the falling aeronaut may be descending at any moment, gravitation will keep on adding speed as if he had just started. Disregarding the slight retardation produced by the resistance of the air, he will fall sixteen feet in the first second, forty-eight feet in the second second, eighty feet in the third second, gaining thirty-two feet in his velocity during every second after the first. From a height of 10,000 feet he would fall in about twenty-five seconds and would strike with a velocity of 400 feet per second.

The same kind of calculation can be applied to the gravitation between the earth and the moon. If the moon were not in motion across the direction of the earth's "pull" it would fall to the earth in about 116 hours.

Now, to return to the mystery, how is this force exerted? Is it really a pull, as it seems to be? The answer to which science is tending is that, instead of being a pull, gravitation is a push—in other words, that the falling aeronaut is pushed toward the ground and the moon is pushed toward the earth.

On the face of it one might think that nothing was gained by this theory, because it seems as impossible that a push should be exerted without a tangible connection as a pull. But the clew is found in the supposed properties of that invisible, intangible, all pervading medium called the ether.

This, to be sure, is explaining one mystery by another, for we know nothing about the ether except that it conveys the waves of light and electricity; but, at any rate, it affords a conceivable explanation of gravitation.—Garrett P. Serviss

Japanese Festivals.

The Japanese festivals are easily remembered: First of first month, the new year; third of third month, feast of dolls, for girls; fifth of fifth month, feast of flags, for boys; seventh of seventh month, the day for the god and goddess of love, Tonabota; ninth of ninth month, the "escape of the mountains," the feast of chrysanthemums. The latter is not now generally observed.

In the Forth bridge there is a horizontal pull of 10,000 tons on the chief spans and a weight of 100,000 tons on their bases. Half a dozen British iron-clads might be hung upon them without causing any undue strain.

OUR ABUSED FEET

Many Ills Come From Wearing
the Wrong Kind of Shoes.

THEN, TOO, WE SHOULD TOE IN

That Is the Natural Way to Walk or Run, as It Puts the Strain Where It Belongs, While Toeing Out Impairs
the Bones and Breeds Trouble.

Corns, ingrowing nails, crooked toes, bunions, spreading feet, arch trouble, aching feet are all caused by toeing out while walking. It is not natural for those who start with normal feet to toe out.

It is natural to toe in, not far in, but just inside of a line straight ahead.
All children toe in, nearly all youths toe in. Some people toe in all their lives, but they are few. All barefooted people toe in. All moccasined Indians toe in. No one can run without toeing in. No speed can be made without doing so. By toeing in the spring of the foot comes from all the small bones of the front part of the foot.
When one toes out he is trying to walk on the inner side of the foot.

Why does toeing out cause trouble?
Because the strain upon the foot in walking is greater than it should be.
It inclines the first two bones of the big toe toward the smaller toes by degrees, until the spring finally comes from the inner side of the big toe and its second joint. This undue strain on the second joint is constantly pulling it inward and away from the smaller bones. As the strain continues the tissues and ligaments that bind the bones in the forefoot together stretch and give way, and finally it becomes separated somewhat and bulges out into what is called a bunion. A bunion is a partial dislocation.

At this stage of impairment the bones connecting with the smaller toes across the ball of the foot settle down, and what is called the transverse arch is impaired. There are two arches in the foot—a longitudinal arch, with which every one is familiar, and the transverse arch across the ball of the foot from side to side. It is the transverse arch that is first affected, and it is at this stage of foot trouble that most people begin to complain and look for help.

Why did those who toe out do so in the first place when it is natural to toe in? The real reason was because they wore shoes. Barefooted people do not toe out, so the shoe is the cause. Shoes are habitually too short and too narrow across the end of the toes, and the long, pointed toe of the shoe helps to prevent toeing naturally. The big toe is strong and monopolizes the limited space; the small toes, being weaker, are crushed in narrowed quarters until their natural symmetry is gone. They are crowded backward by a shoe too short until the ends are curled under and their nails point toward the ground instead of straight ahead. The first two joints of the third and fourth toes are forced upward, and the third joint is pushed be flat, both from side to side and from end to end, so the arch has room to settle down as required with each step to furnish the necessary spring.

The heel may be made snug and provision made for a snug fit across the instep to prevent the heel from slipping. There should be no lift on the heel except just enough to raise it level with the sole, and this lift should be of rubber.

The right kind of a shoe will be a queer looking thing as we now see things, for in place of the offending pointed toe it will look more like the blade of a paddle. It will not be stiff and unyielding. It will be from three to five inches across the ball of the foot. Fashion is whimsical, and such a shoe when it becomes regular may be considered beautiful.—Dr. Arthur R.
Reynolds in American Magazine.

ZEPPELIN AIR CRAFT.

Aluminum Girders and Hoops Line
These Monster Balloons.

The technical details in the construction of Zeppelin air craft are explained in a journal named the Aeroplane.
The visible exterior part of the Zeppelin is merely the cloth or fabric covering of the framework, which consists of sixteen girders made of very thin aluminum. The girders run from end to end of the ship, parallel for most of their length and turning inward to meet one another at nose and tail.
The cylindrical body of the Zeppelin may therefore be said to have sixteen sides on account of the sixteen girders.

To keep these longitudinal girders, or "stringers," in position there are thwartship girders, which run like hoops around the ship and act like the ribs of a boat. There are generally about eighteen hoop girders, spaced an equal distance, one from another, and they are braced across and across inside each hoop to the next by wire bracing, so that they cut up the whole skeleton into a succession of compartments, each of which—except the end compartments—has flat ends and sixteen sides.

In each of these compartments is a gas bag standing on its edge. The idea is that if one gas bag springs a leak or is punctured by a projectile only that one bag collapses, and the weighting of the ship is so arranged that even if four or five gas bags are entirely deflated those that remain will float the ship after all ballast, ammunition and other nonessentials have been thrown overboard.—London Standard.

Emperor Paul of Russia, Tennyson, the father of the poet, dined with Lord St.

Moscow. Several Russian officers of high rank whose names he did not know were also guests. During dinner a guarded reference was made to the emperor's death.

"Why do you speak so gingerly

Tennyson impulsively, leaning across his neighbor, a Russian whose breast was covered with orders. "We know

ed backward by a shoe too short until the ends are curled under and their nails point toward the ground instead of straight ahead. The first two joints of the third and fourth toes are forced upward, and the third joint is pushed down farther and farther as the tissues supporting it become more and more stretched by the pressure from above and the forced spreading of the bones of the foot.

The third bone of the third toe at this stage stands almost straight up and down in the shoe. The result is a corn on top and pain in the foot from the pressure and sometimes a corn or thickening on the bottom of the foot just under the third joint of the third toe. At this stage there are ingrowing nails, due to the sidewise pressure of the shoe, that also are painful, so the sufferer begins to toe out to prevent the pressure pain that would occur from the sore and otherwise impaired small toes if he toed in as he should.

The most sensible covering ever made for the feet is the moccasin of the American Indian, worn without a stocking. Sandals also are good. The sneakers of children and tennis shoes with pliable rubber soles are next best.

Shoes should be so constructed that it will be difficult, if not impossible, to toe out. A line drawn through the length of the big toe of a normal foot backward will strike the heel near the inner edge. Shoes should not compress the toes to alter this line in children. However the toes may have been pressed out of shape, the shoes of adults when made of leather with an unyielding sole should extend straight forward well past the end of the big toe and outward past the third toe and then slope backward past the little toe to the outer ball of the foot. In a shoe so shaped the wearer will find it difficult to toe out; the big toe will have its share of room. The sole should

Tennyson impulsively, leaning across his neighbor, a Russian whose breast was covered with orders. "We know very well in England that the Emperor Paul was murdered. Count Zoffo knocked him down, and Benningesen and Count Pahlen strangled him!"

There was a strained silence; then the ambassador abruptly changed the subject. As the guests filed out into an adjoining room Lord St. Helens drew Tennyson aside. "Don't go into the next room," he whispered, "but fly for your life. The man next you, across whose breast you leaned, was Count Pahlen, and Zoffo was also at the table."

He gave a few hurried directions, and Tennyson rushed off, threw his clothes into a portmanteau and fled behind fast horses to Odessa, still in evening garb, though the cold was intense. He lay hidden for weeks and at last, in the disguise of a servant, was smuggled on board an English frigate.

A Wise Provision.

Did you ever notice when a man smites his thumb with a hammer while putting down a carpet under his wife's supervision how quickly he thrusts the bruised and throbbing member into his mouth? People think it is because the application is soothing. But the movement is purely involuntarily, like winking. The man cannot help it. The fact is that nature knows what a man is apt to say under such circumstances and so has provided him with an automatic stopper. Whenever he hits his thumb hard enough to hurt—and it doesn't take a very hard blow almost to kill a man when he is doing something he doesn't like to do—by a sort of interlocking system his thumb flies into his mouth, and for the critical moment speech is cut off.

A CHRISTMAS SUGGESTION.

In our advertising columns to-day there appears an appeal which should go straight to the heart and conscience of every Canadian. It is made by the Canadian Patriotic Fund on behalf of the families of our soldiers, and it consists of the simple, straightforward suggestion that this Christmas we should give moderately to our relatives and friends and generously to our soldiers' families.

Naturally the less we give to those who are not in actual need the more will we have to give to those who are. And it is only those who are assisted by the Fund. Of the families of the men who have enlisted in Canada's armies, but two out of three receive help from the Fund. The aim of this great patriotic organization is to supplement the Government grant and the soldiers' pay by such sum as will maintain the families in reasonable comfort. To accomplish this, the enormous sum of fourteen million dollars will have to be raised in 1917, and of this Ontario is being asked to contribute six millions.

To comply with the request means sacrifices but certainly none to compare with those made by the women who have sent their husbands to face the German bullets. It should be our pride, as it is our duty, to see that these brave women do not suffer privation by reason of their patriotism—for it must be remembered that no married man has left Canada for the front without his wife's consent.

Ontario as a whole, is prosperous, and there probably will be a tendency this Christmas towards lavish giving of Christmas-boxes. A little thought will show that generosity, even if based on the kindest of motives, is misplaced at this time of great national emergency, if it implies any weakening of ability to help the cause to which we are all devoted. Let our Canadian people, therefore, save in all things non-essential, that they may the better give the things that are essential. And certainly there is nothing more essential than the maintenance of the women and children whose husbands and fathers are fighting Canada's battles "Somewhere in France." To these let us "give till it hurts."

REPORT RE NAPANEE

SEWAGE DISPOSAL SYSTEM.

Dr. C. S. McCullough,
Chief Officer of Health, Toronto, Ont.

Sir:

In accordance with your instructions, I visited the town of Napanee on November 26th, to investigate the cause of the odors from the sewage disposal system. From time to time during the past three weeks disagreeable odors have been given off from the disposal plant and the west street sewer. The citizens have been inclined to blame the William Davies Company for this condition.

During October and shortly before the commencement of the nuisance the Davies Company commenced the operation of a cannery and discharged their waste into the sewer at the head of West street. An inspection of the sewage disposal plant showed that while the cannery waste was responsible for heightening the nuisance to the attention of the citizens, the disposal plant itself was in sad need of supervision. The sedimentation tanks were more than half full of sludge and only one was being operated at a time. This cut the storage to approximately one-quarter of what it was designed for. The sand beds were receiving several times the quantity of sewage they were capable of handling with the result that they were very dirty. The effluent was malodorous and highly putrescible. These conditions alone would give rise to considerable nuisance.

In addition, however, the West street sewer which carries the waste from the Davies Cannery has not sufficient grade at the upper end for the character of waste which reaches it. This upper end has been idle for a year or more, from the time the Cannery Company closed its doors until the William Davies Company commenced operations. It is more than probable that the sewer was partially choked before the re-opening of the factory, and when the Davies Co. discharged their waste, containing considerable solid matter, into the sewer an obstruction occurred, the beans purified and a vile odor was the result. ## RECRUITING MEETING AND BAND CONCERT

The Armoury was well filled on Friday evening last, by an audience of between two and three thousand, to greet and welcome the band of the 25th Battalion, that had already become a favorite of Napanee, by reason of a free concert given at a recruiting meeting in the town hall on a previous occasion, when it was found impossible to accommodate half of the people who wished to attend.

The Armoury, however, gave ample room for the large audience and the seating capacity was soon monopolized and a large number of people stood patiently through out the whole evening. W. J. Paul, M.P., acted as chairman and with his usual skill and affable ability, gave a very good address in aid of, and to encourage enlisting.

One of the other speakers was Lieut. Col. Allan, who is in command of the regiment and he won the confidence of his listeners and would have perhaps been the star of the evening had he not unfortunately brought his wife with him, whose sweet voice and ability as a vocalist, in several numbers, accompanied by the band, totally eclipsed her husband's abilities.

Capt. Sanford gave a very strong appeal to the young men to come forward and don the "Khaki" in defence of the Empire, and his appeal seemed to have extra force by reason of the fact that he is a returned soldier who has done his bit and is now recruiting from wounds. His speech was in the nature of a soldier's diary, of the events which he experienced from the time he enlisted until he was wounded and had to leave the firing line. Many interesting and vivid descriptions were given by him.

Rev. Father O'Connor, the popular Roman Catholic priest of Napanee, was received with cheers, when he willingly, on but a few moments notice, took the platform and gave a stirring address, urging the young men to enlist, showing that his Irish tongue has lost none of its usual eloquence.

Mrs. Freeman gave a couple of vocal numbers in a very pleasing way, earning a well merited encore.

Capt. Mouck, the officer in charge of this recruiting station, with a voice that thundered through the building and could be heard in every corner of the room, wound up the speaking with a "Gatling Gun" speech, which seems to have struck the mark.

The meeting was one of the most successful ever held in Napanee and was due largely to the generous supply of music furnished by the band throughout the evening, including a gleeful song by a choir of the band, and it was heartily encouraged. The singing of "Nearer My God to Thee" with imitation of organ accompaniment was a demonstration of great musical talent. The master piece of the evening, was no doubt, the well known Overture, from the opera of William Tell, rendered in a masterly way.

The general expressed wish was, that we may in the near future again have the pleasure of hearing this excellent band and the officers of the regiment, assure us that after the Christmas holidays, another band concert will be given for the entertainment of the people of Napanee and the vicinity, so what we would say to the band, is simply "AU REVOIR."

one factory, and when the Davies Co. discharged their waste, containing considerable solid matter, into the sewer an obstruction occurred, the beans putrified and a vile odor was the result. Cellars were flooded with this putrifying waste. In one cellar, at least, three pails of beans were collected. When the head became great enough the obstruction was overcome and the whole mass, malodorous in the extreme, was washed down to the already overloaded sewage disposal plant.

To remedy the present conditions and prevent a repetition, two things will be necessary:

1. To secure the periodic (minimum twice a day) flushing of the upper end of the West street sewer. All of the heavy waste can be kept out of the sewers by the construction of a collecting tank by the Davies Company. A periodic flushing of the sewer at frequent intervals can be secured by having the overflow from this tank operate as an automatic syphon, thus flushing the sewer at frequent intervals. The company could also divert the water from their cooling tanks into the small stream which drains the surface water from that area. Care, however, must be taken to prevent the discharge into the stream of water carrying any waste material whatever, organic or inorganic suspended or in solution. This would help materially to lessen the overload upon the disposal plant.

2. To put the sedimentation tanks in good working order and operate them more carefully. The sedimentation tanks should have all the sludge pumped out. In future the sludge should be pumped at frequent and regular intervals. Both tanks should be operated continuously.

(b) Clean the sand beds and keep them clean. To efficiently handle the quantity of sewage now discharged on the sand beds will necessitate very careful operation of the beds. They should be thoroughly cleaned immediately and opened intermittently; they should be cleaned carefully after each rest before being put into operation again. It may be found necessary to reconstruct the beds and convert them either into contact beds or sprinkling filters; the method of operation would then depend on the system.

ANTICS OF PURE GLYCERIN.

This Queer Substance is Endowed With Peculiar Properties.

One of the great advantages of glycerin in its chemical employment is the fact that it neither freezes nor evaporates under any ordinary temperature.

No perceptible loss by evaporation has been detected at a temperature less than 200 degrees F., but if heated intensely it decomposes with a smell that few persons find themselves able to endure. It burns with a pale flame, similar to that from alcohol, if heated to about 300 degrees and then ignited.

Its nonevaporative qualities make the compound of much use as a vehicle for holding pigments and colors, as in stamping and typewriter ribbons, carbon papers and the like.

If the pure glycerin be exposed for a long time to a freezing temperature it crystallizes with the appearance of sugar candy, but these crystals being once melted it is almost an impossibility to get them again into the congealed state.

If a little water be added to the glycerin no crystallization will take place, though under a sufficient degree of cold the water will separate and form crystals, amid which the glycerin will remain in its natural state of fluidity. If suddenly subjected to intense cold pure glycerin will form a gummy mass which cannot be entirely hardened or crystallized.

Altogether it is quite a peculiar substance.

Dismissed for Intemperance, He Enlisted and Regained Commission

An official despatch from Canadian Headquarters contains the following:

The whole Canadian army has learned with sympathy and delight of the reinstatement of Lieut. O. B. Jones to his commissioned rank. Deprived by court-martial of his commission because of an act of intemperance while on duty, Lieut. Jones immediately enlisted as a private in a well-known Montreal battalion. He showed not only strict devotion to duty, but conspicuous gallantry upon several occasions. He became a corporal, then won his sergeant's stripes. He was awarded a D.C.M. for his reckless courage and again a bar for his medal.

On September 15 he was in the thick of the fighting. It was said of him that he was perpetually out killing Germans. His conduct was such as to recommend him for further reward. Later he was so severely wounded that it is improbable he will be again able to serve his country as a soldier, but he is now reinstated as an officer, and he has won back his honor.

MORE NEW WAR BOOKS.

The Public Library Board has in its purchases this year made a special effort to secure all the best and latest war books dealing with every phase of the great struggle and with the striking characteristics of the countries engaged in it. A few more have been added during the past week.

A Prisoner of War—This is a story of a French soldier who was captured by the Germans during the early stages of the war. He relates his experiences in the plain and simple language of a man of action.

Friends of France—No more stirring or inspiring stories have been published than these simple records of American boys driving their Ford ambulances along the firing line collecting the wounded. The extent of the field service of the American Ambulance Corps will surprise most readers.

The Revelations of a German Attaché—An intimate account of Emil Witte attached to the German Embassy at Washington and the Foreign Office in Berlin.

My House in the Field of Honour—No one can afford to miss the reading of this book. It is a most thrilling account of the experiences of the refugees during the famous battle of the Marne and tells how the German officers high in command pillaged and willfully destroyed the home of the author.

The Wrack of the Storm—By the celebrated Belgian author, Maurice Maeterlinck. This book brimming over with pathos and patriotism is written in a dignified yet firm tone. It will take its place in the literature of the world as one of the classics inspired by the sufferings of an innocent and persecuted people.

Counter Currents—By Agnes Repplier, is a series of thoughtful articles by this popular American writer. She unhesitatingly applies the lash where she feels it is most needed and expresses the views held by the great body of Americans.

Our library is now as complete in all its departments as the money at the disposal of the board can make it. It is capable of doing much more good than it is doing and could easily double its usefulness if people now purchasing one membership ticket would buy two, three or four; in fact one for each member of the family. The tastes of the different members may differ and the tickets are not so expensive but that each should not be provided with one and then they can each obtain the books to suit their peculiar tastes. By thus helping themselves they enable the board by the increased revenue thus produced to serve them better than ever before. Now is the time during the long winter evenings to gladden your homes with bright and instructive books.

BELGIUM'S CHRISTMAS.

The following message, bearing the strongest possible appeal, has come to us from the Archbishop of Canterbury, Cardinal Bourne, John Brown, the Moderator of the Church of Scotland, and I. H. Shakespeare, President of the Free Church Council, the text being: "Everyone who has looked into the facts must be convinced of the extremity of Belgium's present distress, and the dire need of further aid, especially the provision of food for little children."

Nothing could be more appropriate than that such gifts should be a Christmas contribution from our home circles throughout the Empire, and we very cordially wish God-speed to the appeal."

THE CHILDREN IN PERIL.

The following facts have reached us from C. C. Wakefield, Lord Mayor of London: "There are 6,575,000 Belgian children whom the Germans still hold captive and oppressed in Belgium. Of these, no less than 1,845,000 are under 12 years of age. Think of them on Christmas Day. Over 1,500,000 working class children in Belgium are entirely dependent upon charity for food. For two years they have been kept alive by the Neutral Commission for Relief, and to which the British National Committee entrusts all its funds. The Germans, though they brutally refuse to feed the Belgians, dare not and do not Commander the Commission's relief supplies. Belgium is menaced by a new peril. The health of her children is being sapped, the future of her race imperilled.

Dr. W. P. Lucas, a famous American specialist in diseases of children, spent three months of exhaustive investigation in Belgium this summer (1916) and reports:

1. Tuberculosis is increasing rapidly among the older children of the working classes.

2. Rickets is increasing among the younger children.

3. Every tuberculosis sanatorium in Belgium is crowded.

4. Babies born now weigh less and measure less. They are generally weak, and many have to be kept alive in incubators.

5. Belgian mothers are unable to nurse their children properly.

6. The birth-rate in Brussels has decreased by 48 per cent. Other large Belgian towns show similar decreases. This is attributed to lack of vitality and nourishment and to mental anxiety.

These are the bald facts of a tragic situation. The doctors agree that more milk and more food must be sent to the Belgian children. Will you help to provide it? Will you help to protect from disease and save from hunger these little ones in Belgium who are so helpless and yet so brave under the heel of the Hun? Give according to your means! Share your Christmas good cheer and fortunate freedom with the children of our brave Ally in Belgium. The consciousness of a national duty fulfilled, and of mercy bestowed, will surely bring to you the highest and truest form of happiness.

SLEEPING NEAR DEATH.

Naps That Might Have Landed Those Who Took Them In Eternity.

A short time ago a man was discovered in his lunch hour fast asleep on a plank. His arms were hanging down, one on each side of the board, which was about a foot wide. He was snoring gloriously and quite careless, whether awake or asleep, that if he turned over for greater comfort he would "tumble out of bed" 120 feet, for that plank was part of the scaffolding erected for the repair of a church spire!

A similar disregard for danger was reported lately during the erection of some electrical works. One of the men engaged on the tall chimney, missing his mate at the lunch hour, went up the half finished chimney to find him. He discovered him fast asleep on a narrow ledge of brick inside the shaft, a fall from which meant a drop of eighty feet.

On one occasion a circus arrived in a certain town not a hundred miles from London at an early hour after a long journey and a performance the previous night. As a consequence few of the company got any sleep. That day there was the usual procession and the afternoon performance. The lion tamer had had a very rough time because of the illness of one of his beasts.

The evening performance arrived, and this man had to pretend to go to sleep with his head on the body of a couchant lion, finishing up the performance by springing up and putting his head in another lion's mouth.

But when the jumping up time came a gentle snore was heard. The man was fast asleep with his head pillowed on a lion!—London Globe.

WHO IS BRUSSLIOFF?

Cousin Declares That He Is Really Sir Hector Macdonald.

"When a man is dead, then he's done for," runs the old ballad, but there are a few who do not come under this generalization. We have had the famous Dauphin of France, titular King Louis XVII., who is said to have escaped from the deadly Temple, and to have lived in America or elsewhere as various people. And two novelists took the idea as bases for interesting novels. We recall news items how Oscar Wilde did not die in France, but was buried in effigy, and lived to find life anew, hidden away. The mystery of Marshal Ney is an old story. And there was Hector Macdonald, who has reappeared in the person of more than one noted military leader; especially lately, he has been identified with General Brussloff.

There are, then, men who simply will not stay dead. The story of Brussloff, while the reverse of probable, is still interesting enough to be reproduced. A writer recently gave out an interview with a resident of Gotham who said she was a cousin of the supposedly dead Macdonald. In this the identity with Brussloff was put forth. We learn:

The legend of Sir Hector Macdonald is one of the strangest and most romantic in modern history. Charged with immoral conduct in Ceylon in 1903, Sir Hector, then a brigadier-general of the British army, a Knight Commander of the Bath, and a member of the Distinguished Service Order, was reported to have committed suicide in a Paris hotel after visiting London and failing to have the charges dismissed.

Officially, General Sir Hector Macdonald is dead and buried in a little cemetery outside of Edinburgh. His wife remarried many years ago.

Tradition has it, however, that the suicide in the Paris hotel was not Sir Hector, but a traveler in an adjoining room. Seeing at once the opportunity, Sir Hector, according to the story, changed clothes with the corpse, and, in his new identity, departed unsuspected. Like the man in Arnold Bennett's story, Sir Hector went forth into the world with his life to use as he liked.

The legend, which was previously hazy and unconfirmed, takes on new life in the words of this Mrs. Taylor, Macdonald's cousin. The reporter asked a number of questions, trying to shake her belief in the identity of the hero of the eastern front but without any success. The account states:

"I am absolutely certain," she said, "that General Brussloff is really Sir Hector. While I am only a distant relative, cousins of Sir Hector live in London and Canada and Australia, and I know that they have been in communication with him."

"Sir Hector was a small man, stockily built. Gen. Brussloff is of the same figure. In his character of Russian general, Sir Hector has grown a moustache, but it does not make his features unrecognizable."

"Many people who did not know of Sir Hector have commented on the queer and extraordinary circumstances connected with the rise of the Russian commander. It is odd, to say the least, they point out, that a man in supreme command of one of the greatest offensives of the war should be of a previous history totally unknown. 'Brussloff' is not a real Russian name, anyway. And the photographs of the general show he does not look like a Russian."

NAMING A TOWN.

The Professor's Story of How "Rolla" Got Its Title.

"You have given quaint and beautiful names to some of the cities of your state," remarked a visitor in Missouri. "I have often wondered where you obtained them. There is Sedalla, for instance. And there is Rolla. Every student of history knows of Rollo, but whence came this more beautiful word? Has Rolla any connection at all with Rollo?"

"Not even the remotest," was the response of a professor in one of the state educational institutions, for to him the question was addressed.

"How, then, did the name originate? Can you tell?"

"Yes," answered the professor, with a smile. "The origin of the word in its present form is a part of the folklore of the place. The community was made up at first very largely of immigrants from North Carolina, who were not much given to the study of spelling, but who cherished a pride in their native state and determined to give the name of its proud old capital to their new city in the west. The capital of the Old North State was named for Sir Walter Raleigh of the spacious days of great Elizabeth." The Missouri immigrants, not recalling the correct orthography of the name, spelled it phonetically, as it seemed to them, for they supposed that a final 'a' was equivalent to a final 'y.' They spelled it R-o-l (rawl) l-a (ly). And that was the origin of the word that seems to give you so much pleasure."—Youth's Companion.

CURIOUS DEATH CUSTOM.

Drying and Cremating a Corpse In Central America.

In "Central American and West Indian Archaeology" T. A. Joyce describes the ceremony of corpse drying, which was followed a year later by cremation. He uses Andagoya's account of the details observed at the decease of the Cacique Pocorosa:

The body of the dead chief was decked with golden ornaments and wrapped in his richest cotton cloths. The heir and principal men then assembled and suspended the corpse by cords in the house, placing beneath several pans of lighted charcoal. While it was drying it was watched continually by ten of the chief men, who sat round it night and day wearing black mantles which covered head and body. No one else was allowed to enter the hut, and from time to time one of the watchers would strike a series of slow strokes on a drum, this action being followed by a chant in monotone in which the principal actions of the deceased were enumerated. When the body was dry it was removed to the house of the new chief, where it remained suspended for a year.

On the anniversary a great feast was held, at the conclusion of which the deceased, with his arms and models of his canoes, was burned in the courtyard. It was stated that the smoke went to the place where his soul was, but the exact whereabouts of the soul itself was not specified.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for the privilege through your columns of the Hospital for Sick Children Provincial Charity.

Our need of money is in the children's need of help can judge how great that be when last year 3,045 sick were treated as in-patients, be seen from the 1916 figures patients were admitted places outside Toronto.

Last year 271 in-patients for deformities, such as bow-legs, knock-knees, Pott's spine, dislocations, infantile tubercular disease of knee,

Is the Hospital for Sick Children take dollars out of your pocket to take babies out of cradles? That is the question.

One gift more in the Hospital means one coffin less.

LITTLE WHITE HEARSE The Hospital must be a help for little children from human kindness, or sexton digging graves for little children the soil of many a cemetery.

The Hospital for Sick Children only volunteer its mercy in your friends of little children your money for service in hospital's never-ending battle for the little ones.

Let your money fight in the of some mother's trouble some little child from the pain, disease and death.

Can the Hospital leave a die because the fathers of children have left home to fight in the British battle line the Hospital help the children's soldiers with its care help the Hospital with your money.

You have money enough every other war fund without back a dollar from the Hospital fund—the fund that helps to save the lives of little children the soldiers' little children.

Canning Without Sugar.

Housewives who intended to reduce the amount of canning done this season by reason of the high cost of sugar may abandon that project and put up as much as they wish, is the statement issued by the canning specialists at the Department of Agriculture.

This can be made possible by the use of boiling water when sugar syrup is beyond one's means. Any fruit, they say, may be successfully sterilized and retained in the pack by simply adding boiling water instead of the hot syrup. Most fruits canned alone in water do not retain their flavor, texture, and color as do those canned in sugar, and must be sweetened when used for sauces or desserts.

In order to can without sugar the product must be canned on the same day that it is picked. It should be prepared for canning in the ordinary way. Then the containers should be placed in a sterilizing vat such as a wash boiler with a false bottom, and completely covered with boiling water. The sterilization process may extend from 10 to 30 minutes, according to the process used. After sterilization the packs should be removed, the glass jars sealed and wrapped in paper to prevent bleaching and stored in a dry, cool place.—Hartford Times.

Queens Sold Almanacs.

The sale of almanacs was once a lucrative monopoly. Queen Elizabeth granted the sole right to publish "almanacs and prognostications" to the Stationers' Company, and James I. extended the privilege to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, but for centuries only these three bodies were permitted to issue printed calendars. The monopoly ended when the claim of the king to the privilege of granting or withholding permission to issue calendars—a survival, perhaps, from days when kings asserted their right to regulate all things, including even the times and seasons—was definitely disproved and proclaimed non-existent. Now anybody can say who's who anywhere.—London Chronicle.

An Eskimo's Dwelling.

We do not look for any great amount of inventive genius among the Eskimos, but for years they have employed a rather complete respirator, used in the preparation and taking of a vapor bath, as a means of protection from the dense smoke. This Eskimo respirator is a little basket woven of twisted strands of fine grass. It is placed with its shallow side against the mouth, and a wooden peg, which arises from the center of the basket, is held between the teeth. For this purpose water is evaporated over a big fire in a very low hut, which is tightly closed to keep in the heat. In this stifling atmosphere the employment of a respirator is absolutely necessary.—London Globe.

Nelse Won't Deceive You.

The big boss was consulting Nelse, the janitor, relative to the qualifications of an applicant for a place as assistant janitor.

"Do you know this boy's reputation for truth and veracity?" he asked.

"Yas, suh; yas, suh; I guess I do," responded Nelse.

"Well, what is it?"

"Well, suh, he always tells de trufe. I reckon—dat is, I never is ketched him in no lie. But 'bout dis here 'vras'ty bizness I'm gwinter be fair wid you. Some say he will an' some say he won't."

The Seismograph.

Though the man in the street might easily mistake a seismic disturbance for the rumbling of a traction engine or an explosion, the marvelously delicate instruments which record earthquake shocks are immune from such delusions. The recording pen of the seismometer ignores any local tremblings which have not a seismic origin, but the faintest real earth quakings, though they have traveled thousands of miles through the earth, set the pen tracing the telltale graph by means of which the seismologist calculates the place, time and magnitude of the happening.—London Chronicle.

Our First Tariff.

The first tariff act in our country was signed by President Washington on July 4, 1789, near the very beginning of his first administration. Hamilton was the author of the measure, which provided for specific duty on some forty-seven articles and ad valorem rates on other groups of articles. The second tariff act was approved by the president in August, 1790.

An Old Superstition.

It was a common superstition in ancient Italy that if a woman were found spinning on a highroad the crops would be ruined for that year. In most sections of Italy a woman was forbidden by law thus to spin or even to carry an uncovered spindle on the highway.

Heard in Court.

"Your honor, I acknowledged the reference of the opposing counsel to my gray hair. My hair is gray, and it will continue to be gray as long as I live. The hair of that gentleman is black and will continue to be black as long as he dyes."—Boston Transcript.

The ham sandwich, which 5 cents, now frequently cost. The same disturbing truth other things in common if side and outside of lunch room is no need of statistics from to inform us that the cost has advanced. Every spend ey knows it. Retailers are reluctant to put prices up thereally realized. They know sumption decreases as price. That means less business, depend partly on large bush more than the traffic which charged the traffic falls off.

Change making is one of in up to date retailing. I done quickly if expenses are down. The young woman at room desk has not time to nies. She must deal in nickel and quarters if she is to maintain astonishing speed and accuracy.

We need another coin. The pieces were confused with were hard to use because not fractions of other currencies but a statistician thinks mals. The rest of us do our fractions. Four three-cent pieces, but there is no Eight of them make 24 cent coin almost corresponding to cent more. If three cent pieces again issued they would be a bill.

With a half nickel it would be different. Half a nickel is a every coin from the mint. Such a coin 5 cent raises have been so common. If there be such a coin many pieces come down.

SAVING THE RU

Tale of a Bottle of Ink, a Qu Friend and Some Sa

While stopping at a newly sively furnished hotel a gentleman bottle of ink on a costly light blue and pink in color, who was calling on her at quieted her fears by assuring she would fix it so that not est stain would be left.

First she had a quart of salt sent up at once. Sifting through her fingers, she could ink spot entirely. To all at there was nothing but a ptable salt on the rug. Over this she placed a he cautioning the guest not to nor to allow the maid to do promising to return the next to finish the job she went about her own affairs.

True to her word, she made appearance the following after calling for a dustpan and wheel removed the salt. There was slightest stain of ink on the salt, having carefully sifted spot, had slipped into the pile, had slipped into the pile, had slipped into the pile, had slipped into the pile. Of course except a thin layer on the pile, was as black as make it.

This method of preventing is as effective as it is simple. A cret of success lies in acting having fine salt, sifting it on so slowly and gently that it the goods and allowing it undisturbed until it is bone d it may be safely removed with broom and dustpan.—New Y boy and Girl Had Terrible Experience With a Cougar.

The remarkable exploit of an 11-year-old girl and an eight-year-old boy in fighting off a full-grown cougar at Cowichan, B.C., and their wonderful gallantry in each protecting the other when the cougar seemed to have one or the other at its mercy, has given rise to a movement on Vancouver Island for recognition from some national society that honors valor and self-sacrifice. The provincial game warden received a copy of the girl's own story.

The story of the girl, Doreen Ashburn, follows:

"At about 1.30 p.m. I left our house to go down to a pasture to catch our saddle pony. Anthony Farrer, aged eight, accompanied me.
When about half a mile from the house we saw a large panther crouching on the path about 20 feet distant;
we both turned to run, but the panther sprang on me, and I fell face downward. The animal remained on my back and began purring. I called to Anthony to run home and save himself, but he called to me to lie perfectly quiet, that he had a plan.

"He then jumped from a small tree directly on the panther, knocking it off my back, and I got up. The panther turned and struck Anthony with its paw in the face, tearing his nose and cheek. Anthony fell to the ground and the panther jumped on his back and scratched his back with its claws and tore the back of his scalp with its teeth. Anthony called to me to run, but I did not. I then attacked the panther with the bridle, and beat it, and got my right arm into its mouth. I scratched its right eye with my finger nails, and it bit me through the right arm above the elbow and scratched my hands and body and tore my clothes.

"I succeeded in driving it off the boy and it stood up on its hind quarters and fought me, but finally turned and slunk under a log. Anthony was covered with blood and badly hurt, and I assisted him to run home."

The document is accompanied by a statement from Charles March, who shot the cougar, and Dr. Stokes, who attended the children.

The cougar measured seven feet from nose to tip of tail and weighed 75 pounds.

the dean (Bishop Ryle), the Rev. L.

FOOLING MARK TWAIN.

An Autograph Joke That Was Sprung Upon the Humorist.

George W. Cable had been giving readings from his wonderful Creole stories and had visited Mark Twain in Hartford. While there he had been taken down with the mumps, and it was during his convalescence that the plan for a combined reading tour had been made. This was early in the year; the tour was to begin in the autumn.

Cable, having quite recovered in the meantime, conceived a plan to repay Mark Twain's hospitality. It was to be an April fool—a great complimentary joke. A few days before the first of the month he had a "private and confidential" circular letter printed and mailed it to 150 of Mark Twain's friends and admirers in Boston, New York and elsewhere asking that they send the humorist a letter to arrive
April 1 requesting his autograph.

It would seem that each one receiving this letter must have responded to it, for on the morning of April 1 an immense pile of letters was unloaded on Mark Twain's table. He did not know what to make of it, and Mrs. Clemens, who was party to the joke, slyly watched results. They were the most absurd requests for autographs ever written.
He was fooled and mystified at first,
then, realizing the nature and magnitude of the joke, he entered into it fully —delighted, of course, for it was really a fine compliment.

Some of the letters asked for autographs by the yard, some by the pound.
Some commanded him to sit down and copy a few chapters from "The Innocents Abroad." Others asked that his autograph be attached to a check.

Always the Unknown.

Permit me to introduce myself. You have been on intimate terms with me for some time.

And yet you do not know me. You have talked with me on long walks and in the still watches of the night.
You have flattered me and cajoled me and pleaded with me and condoned me. And yet you do not know me.

The worst of this is that you will never know me. You will always go on believing that you do. This is your fate.

I am the unknowable. I am the one you live with and of whom you are destined, so long as you live, to be in absolute ignorance.

I am the one you think you are!

Preparedness.

"What was the date of Columbus' discovery of America?" an examiner asked.

"Fourteen ninety-two," the bright boy replied instantly.

"Right," said the examiner. "And why was that date important for you to remember?"

"Because I knew you would be sure to ask it," the bright boy said.

An Office Cushion.

If those of you who have a husband or brother or sister working in an office will go to the trouble of making a flat cushion for the chair of the worker you will find that it saves the trousers or skirt from getting shiny and also helps to retain the garment in form.—Good Housekeeping.

Older Still.

"It makes a chap feel rather old to meet the grown son of a former college mate."

"That's so, but if he tries to make love to the grown daughter of a former college chum she'll make him feel

Gallieni's Epigrams.

The late General Gallieni was a master of epigrammatic expressions.
"Don't criticise until you can remedy," is one. "If you've got brains, use them; if not, plant cabbages," was another of the general's sayings. "Set things going, and keep them going," member," were two other counsels.—

Temperament.

Technically, temperament means "the special type of mental constitution due to natural characteristics of the bodily organism." Broadly speaking, temperament is character—the mental make-up of a person, the way he is inclined to think and feel about things in gen-

"THE MELTING OF MOLLY"

Sallie sat in the large armchair in the middle of the room weeping in the slow, regular way a woman has of starting out with tears when she means to let them flow for hours, maybe days, and there were just five echoes to her grief, all done in different keys and characters.

Cousin Martha knelt beside the chair and held Sallie's head on her ample bosom, but I must say that the expression on her face was one of bewilderment, as well as of grief.

The three little Horton cousins sat close together in the middle of the old hair cloth sofa by the window and were weeping as modestly and helplessly as they did everything else in life, while Mrs. Hargrove, in her chair under her son's portrait, was just plainly out and out howling.

And on the hearth rug, before the tiny fire of oak chips that the old ladies liked to keep burning all summer, stood the master of the house, and for once in my life I have seen the personification of masculine helplessness. He was a tragedy, and I flew straight to him with arms wide open, which clasped both his shoulders as I gave him a good shake to arouse him from his paralysis.

"What's the matter?" I demanded with the second shake.

"I'm a brute, Evelina," he answered, and a sudden discouragement lined every feature of his beautiful Biblical face. I couldn't stand that, and I hugged him tight to my breast for an instant and then administered another earthquake shake.

"Tell me exactly what has happened," I demanded, looking straight into his tragic eyes and letting my hands slip from his shoulders down his arms until they held both of his hands tight and warm in mine.

Jane, I was glad that I had offered the cup of my eyes to him full of this curious intersex elixir of life that you have induced me to seek so blindly, for he responded to the dose immediately, and the color came back into his face as he answered me just as sensibly as he would another man.

"The men who are surveying the new railroad from Cincinnati to the gulf have laid their experimental lines across the corner of Greenwood cemetery, and they say it will have to cut

der that I didn't answer:

"Adam!"

I don't know just what would have happened if Uncle Peter hadn't broken in on the interview with his crustiest chips on both shoulders and so much excitement bottled up that he had to let it fly like a double reporter.

"Dodson is down at the hotel looking for you, James," he began as he hurried up the steps. "Big scheme this—got him in a corner if the C. and G. comes along this side of Old Harpeth—make him squeal, hey?"

"Who's Dodson?" I asked with the greatest excitement. I was for the first time getting a whiff of the schemes of the masculine mighty, but I was squelched promptly by Uncle Peter.

"We've no time for questions, Evelina, now—go back to your tatting, hey?" He answered me as he began to buttonhole the Crag and lead him down the steps.

"Dodson is the man who is laying down and contracting for the line across the river, Evelina," answered Cousin James without taking any notice whatever of Uncle Peter's squelching of me. "If this other line can just be secured he will have to come to our terms—and the situation will be saved."

As he spoke he took my hand in his and led me at his side down the front walk to the gate, talking as he went, for Uncle Peter was chuckling on ahead like a steam tug in a hurry.

"And the shades of Henry will again assume the maintenance of his family," I hazarded with lack of respect of the dead, impudence to Cousin James about his own affairs and unkindness by implication to Sallie, who loves me better than almost anybody in the world does. And I got my just punishment by seeing a lovely look of tender concern rise in Cousin James' eyes as he stopped short in the middle of the walk.

"I want to go back a minute to speak to Sallie before I go on downtown," he said quickly, and before Uncle Peter's remonstrances had exploded he had taken the steps two at a bound and disappeared in the front door.

"Sooner he marries that lazy lollypop the better," fumed Uncle Peter as he waited at the gate. "The way for a man to quench his thirst for woman sweets is to marry a pot of honey like that and then come right on back to

Henrietta has not been heard to indulge in profane language since I had a long talk with her last week out in the garden, that ended in stubby tears and the gift of a very lovely locket which I impressed upon her was as chaste in design as I wished her speech to become.

The twins have been provided with several very lovely pieces of wearing apparel from my rapidly skill acquiring needle. That's on the credit side of my balance. But that is all, and it doesn't sound revolutionary, does it, Jane?

Petunia married Jasper according to his word of promise, and I have taught her to cook about five French dishes that he couldn't concoct to save his life, and which help her to keep him in his place. His pomposity grows daily but he eyes me with suspicion when he sees me in secret conclave with Petunia.

"We needs a man around this place," I heard him mutter the other day as I left the kitchen.

I wonder!

The garden has been weeded, replanted, trained, clipped and garnished, and my arms are as husky and strong as a boy's and my nose badly sunburned from my strenuousness with hoe and trimming scissors.

All of which I have done and done well. But when I think of all those five girls that are waiting for me to solve the emotional formula by which they can work out and establish the fact that man equals woman, I get weak in the knees.

Jane's letters are just prods.

CHAPTER VII.

"I don't understand him at all."

YOUR cultivated artistic nature ought to be a very beautiful revelation to the spiritual character of the young Methodist divine you wrote me of in your last letter. Encourage him in every way with affectionate interest in his work, especially in the Epworth league on his country circuit. I am inclosing $50 subscription to the work, and I hope you will give as much. You have not mentioned Mr. Hayes for several letters. I fear you are prejudiced against him. Seek to know and weigh his character before you judge him as unfit for your love." Thus Jane wrote.

The highly spiritual Mr. Haley glared at Polk for an hour out here on my porch when he interrupted us in one of our Epworth league talks in such an unspiritual manner that Polk said he felt as if he had been introduced to the Apostle Paul while he was still Saul of Tarsus. I had to pet the dominie decorously for a week before he regained his benign manner. Of course, however, it was trying to even a highly spiritual nature like his to have Polk insist on pinning a rose in my hair right before his eyes.

About Polk I feel that I am in the midst of one of those great calm, oily stretches of ocean that a ship is rocked gently in for a few hours before the storm tosses it first to heaven and then to hell. He is so psychic, and in a way attuned to me, that he partly understands my purpose in declaring my love for him to put him at a disadvantage in his lovemaking to me, and he hasn't let me do it yet, while his tacit suit goes on. It is a drawn battle between us and is going to be

"Fruit-a-tives" Made As If Walking On

ORILLIA, ONT., Nov. 28

"For over two years, I was with Constipation, Drowsiness, Appetite and Headaches. One your sign which read 'Fruit-a-tives' made you feel like walking. This appealed to me, so I tried a box. In a very short time I began to feel better, and now I have a good appetite, relish my food, and the Headaches entirely. I recommend this fruit medicine to all my friends."

"Well," I said suddenly with a mischievous grin, "do it! Tell any like how much you like him what happens."

"I feel as if—as if"—Nell and I don't blame her; I won't say as much to her. "I feel tell Mr. James I love him I the pain, the—pain—that I Polk. It would be so intense a man a thing like that."

"Do it!" I gasped and we the class in romantics.

If any jungle explorer this mapped and charted a woman he had better pack up his kit of warfare and recorders down to Glendale, Tenn.

Nell and I must have talk along the same lines, but I member what we said. I had the high lights on the corner but long after I lost her I whirlwind feeling of amazement was like trying to balance the lid of the tinder box didn't know whether or no touched off the fuse.

Has honeysuckle garbed peth been seeing things like on for centuries and not in I think I would have been questioning him until now: Caroline hadn't stopped at and called to me.

I think Lee was giving Caroline stroll home from the postoffice twilight as an extra treat in allowance of him, and she was glowing and sweet and wonder the Cherokee rose hedge didn't droop their heads in humility before her.

"What's a lovely lady do all by herself in the gloom asked in his rich, warm voice I hate him!"

"Come take a walk with me, dear," Caroline begged though I knew what it would be if I should intrude on the hour with her near lover.

Please, God, if I seem to you into a profane situation

The men who are surveying the new railroad from Cincinnati to the gulf have laid their experimental lines across the corner of Greenwood cemetery, and they say it will have to run that way or go across the river and parallel the lines of the other road. If they come on this side of the river they will force the other road to come across too, and in that case we will get the shops. It just happens that such a line will make necessary the removal of—of poor Henry's remains to another lot. Sallie's is the only lot in the cemetery that is that high on the bluff. Henry didn't like the situation when he bought it himself, and I thought that as there is another lot right next to her mother's for sale she would not—but, of course, I was brutal to mention it to her. I hope you will find it in your heart to forgive me, Sallie." And as he spoke he extracted himself from me and walked over and laid his hand on Sallie's head.

"It was such a shock to her—poor Henry!" sobbed little Cousin Jasmine, and the other two little sisters sniffed in chorus.

"To have railroad trains running by Greenwood at all will be disturbing to the peace of the dead," snorted Mrs. Hargrove. "We need no railroad in Glendale. We have never had one. And that is my last word—no!"

"Four miles to the railroad station across the river is just a pleasant drive in good weather," said Cousin Martha plaintively as she cuddled Sallie's sobs more comfortably down on her shoulder.

"I feel that Henry would doubt my faithfulness to his memory if I consented to such a desecration," came in smothered tones from the pillowing shoulder.

And not one of all those six women had stopped to think for one minute that the minor fact of the disturbing of the ashes of Henry Carruthers would be followed by the major one of the restoration of the widow's fortune and the lifting of a huge financial burden off the strong shoulders they were all separately and collectively leaning upon.

I exploded, but I am glad I drew the Crag out on the porch and did it to him alone.

"Evelina, you are refreshing if strenuous," he laughed after I had spent five minutes in stating my opinions of women in general and a few in particular. "But I ought not to have hurt Sallie by telling her about the lines until they are a certainty. It is so far only a possibility. They may go across the river anyway."

"And, as for seeing Sallie swaddled in your consideration and fed yourself as a sacrifice from a spoon, I am tired of it," I flamed up again. "It's not good for her. Feed and clothe her and her progeny—men in general have brought just such burdens as that upon you in particular by their attitude toward us—but do let her begin to exert just a small area of her brain on the subject of the survival of the fit to live. You don't swaddle or feed me!"

"Eve!" he said softly under his breath as his wonderful, gentle eyes sank down way below the indignation and explosiveness to the quiet pool that lies at the very bottom of my heart.

Nobody ever found it before, and I didn't know it was there myself, but I felt as if it were being drained up into heaven.

"Eve!" he said again, and it is a wonder waited at the gate. "The way for a man to quench his thirst for woman sweets is to marry a pot of honey like that and then come right on back to the bread and butter game. Here's a letter Jasper gave me to bring along for you from town. Go on and read it, and do not disturb the workings of my brain while I wait for James—workings of a great brain, hey?"

There is no better sedative for a woman's disturbed and wounded emotions than a little stiff brain work. Rickard's letter braced my viny drooping of mind at once and from thinking into the Crag's affairs of sentiment I turned with masculine vigor to begin to mix into his affairs of finance. However, I wish that the first big business letter I ever got in my life hadn't had to have a strain of love interest running through it. Still, Dickie is a trump card in the man pack.

It seems that as his father is one of the most influential directors and largest stockholders in this new branch of the Cincinnati and Gulf railroad he has got the commission for making the plans for all the stations along the road, and he wants to give me the commission for drawing all the gardens for all the station yards. It will be tremendous for both of us so young in life, and I never dared hope for such a thing. I had only hoped to get a few private gardens of some of my friends to laze and pose over, but this is startling. My mind is beginning to work on in terms of hedges and fountains already and Dickie may be coming south any minute.

I have been in Glendale a whole month now, and I can't see that my influence has revolutionized the town as yet. I don't seem to be of half the importance that I thought I was going to be. I have tried, and I have offered that bucket of love that I thought up to everybody, but whether they have drunk of it to profit I am sure I can't say. In fact, my loneliness has liquefied my gaseous affection into what almost looks like officiousness.

Still, I know Uncle Peter is happier than he ever was before because he has got me to come to as a refuge from Aunt Augusta, a confidante for his views of life that he is not allowed to express at home and also the certainty of one of Jasper's juleps.

Sallie has grown so dependent on me that my shoulders are assuming a masculine squareness to support her weight. I am understudying Cousin James to such an extent over at Widegables that I feel like the heir to his house. Cousin Martha sends for me when the chimney smokes and the cows get sick. I have twice changed $5 for little Cousin Jasmine and sternly told the man from out on their farm on Providence road that he must not root up the lavender bushes to plant turnip greens in their places. I afterward rented the patch from him to grow the lavender because he said he couldn't lose the price that the greens would bring him "for crotchets."

Mrs. Hargrove has given me her will to keep for her, and the sealed instructions for her burial. I hope when the time comes the two behests will strike a balance, but I doubt it.

Her ideas of a proper funeral seem to coincide with those of Queen Victoria, whom she has admired through life and mourns sincerely.

vantage in his lovingmaking to me, and he hasn't let me do it yet, while his tacit suit goes on. It is a drawn battle between us and is going to be fought to the death. In the meantime Nell—

And while I was on the porch sitting with Richard Hall's letter in my hand, still unread, Nell herself came down the front walk and sat down beside me.

"Why, I thought you had gone fishing with Polk," I said as I cuddled her up to me a second. She laid her head on my shoulder and heaved such a sigh that it shook us both.

"I didn't quite like to go with him alone, and Henrietta wouldn't go because a bee had stung the red headed twin, and she wanted to stay to scold Sallie," she answered with both hesitation and depression in her voice.

"Polk is—is strenuous for a whole day's companionship," I answered experimentally, for I saw the time had come to exercise some of the biceps in Nell's femininity in preparation for just what I knew she was to get from Polk. My heart ached for what I knew she was suffering. I had had exactly those growing pains for months following that experience with him on the front porch after the dance four years ago, and I had had change of scene and occupation to help.

"I don't understand him at all," faltered Nell, and she raised her eyes as she bared her wound to me.

"Nell," I said with trepidation as I began on this, my first disciple, "you aren't a bit ashamed or embarrassed or humiliated in showing me that you love me, are you?"

"You know I've adored you ever since I could toddle at your heels, Evelina," she answered, and the love message her great brown eyes flashed into mine was as sweet as anything that ever happened to me.

"Then why should you wonder and suffer and restrain and be humiliated at your love for Polk?" I asked, firing point blank at all of Nell's traditions. "Why not tell him about it and ask him if he loves you?"

The shot landed with such force that Nell gasped, but answered as straight out from the shoulder as I had aimed.

"I would rather die than have Polk Hayes know how he—he affects me," she answered, with her head held high.

"Then what you feel for him is not worthy love, but something entirely unworthy," I answered loftily, with a very poor imitation of Jane's impressiveness of speech.

"I know it," she faltered into my shoulder. "If it were Mr. James Hardin I loved I wouldn't mind anybody's knowing it, but something must be wrong with Polk or me or the way I feel. What is it?"

For a moment I got so stiff all over that Nell raised her head from my shoulder in surprise. Do all women feel about the Crag as I do?

"I don't know," I answered weakly.

And I don't know! Oh, Jane, your simple experiment proposition is about to become compound quadratics.

Then I got a still further surprise.

"I wouldn't in the least mind telling Mr. James how I like him—if you think it is all right," Nell mused, looking pensively at the first pale star that was rising over Old Harpeth. "I would enjoy it because I have always adored him, and it would be so interesting to see what he'd say."

her if I should intrude on this hour with her near lover.

Please, God, if I seem to be you into a profane situation help it. I must have help! Some way to assist Caroline Lee into a real man and then for herself. She must have it he needs her. And show me quick! Amen!

Jane, I hope you will be able to get the data out of this jumble doubt it. Anyway, I'm grateful the lock and key on this book.

As I stood at the gate and Lee and Caroline sauntered down moon flecked street a mocking the tallest of the oak twins my roof shelter called wooing one of the top boughs and answered from about the same the same limb.

"What did Dodson have to say—is he coming across?" I demanded of him before he got quite to my gate.

"Not if he can help it," he answered as he came close and leaned against one of the tall stone posts, so that his grandly shaped head with its ante-bel-lum squirts of hair was silhouetted against the white starred wistaria vine in a way that made me frantic for several buckets of monochrome water colors and a couple of brushes as big as those used for whitewashing.
In about ten great splashes I could have done a masterpiece of him that would have drawn artistic fits from the public of gay Paris. I never see him that I don't long for a box of pastels or get the ghost of the odor of oil paint in my nose.

"The whole thing will be settled in a month," he continued, with a sigh that had a hint of depression in it, and an astral shape of Sallie manifested itself hanging on his shoulder. However, I controlled myself and listened to him.
"There is to be a meeting of the directors of both roads over in Bolivar in a few weeks, and they are to come to some understanding. The line across the river is unquestionably the cheapest and best grade, and there is no chance of getting them to run along our bluff unless we can show them some advantage in doing so, and I can't see what that will be."

"What makes it of advantage for a railroad to run through any given point in a rural community like this, Cousin James?" I asked, with a glow of intellect mounting to my head, the like of which I hadn't felt since I delivered my junior thesis in political economy with Jane looking on, consumed with pride.

"Towns that have good stock or grain districts around them with good roads for hauling do what is called 'feeding' a railroad," he answered. "Bolivar can feed both roads with the whole of the Harpeth valley on that side of the river.
They'll get the roads, I'm thinking.
Poor old Glendale!"

"Isn't there anything to feed the monsters this side of the river?" I demanded, indignant at the barrenness of the south side of the valley of old Harpeth.

"Very little unless it's the scenery along the bluff," he replied, with the depression sounding still more clearly in his voice, and his shoulders drooped against the unsympathetic old stone post in a way that sent a pang to my heart.

"Jamie, is all you've got tied up in the venture?" I asked softly, using the name that as very small I had given him in a long ago when the world was young and not full of problems.

"That's not the worst, Evelina," he answered in a voice that was positively haggard. "But what belongs to the rest of the family is all in the pensively on me. "Of course I should be desolate without mine, but what could I do with them if I didn't have all of you dear people to help me with them?"

Her wistful dependence had charm.

I looked at the twin with the yellow fuzz on the top of its head that has half marked it as the kitten in my mind, seated on Sallie's lap with her head on Sallie's shoulder, looking like a baby bud folded against the full rose, and I couldn't help laughing.
Kit had been undressed three times after her bath this morning, while Cousin Martha, Cousin Jasmine and Mrs. Hargrove argued with each other whether she should or shouldn't have a scrap of flannel put on over her fat little stomach. Henrietta finally decided the matter by being impudent and sensible to them all about the temperature.

"Don't you all 'spose God made the sun some to heat up kit's stomach?" she demanded scornfully as she grabbed the little roly-poly bone of contentle slips. Mamie says Ned remarked on the fact that the baby was hardly presentable when you girls stopped in with him to see it the other day. Nell, I urged her to get right to work fixing him up. It is wrong for children not to be kept as daintily as their father likes to see them."

How any woman that is as spiritually minded as I am and who has so much love for the whole world in her heart and such a deep purpose always to offer it to her fellow men according to their need of it can have the vile temper I possess I cannot see.

"And the sight that would please me better than anything else I have even thought up to want to see," I found myself saying when I became conscious—I hope I didn't use any of the oaths of my forefathers which must have been tempting my refined foremothers for generations and which I secretly admire Henrietta for indulging in on occasions of impatience with Sallie—"would be Ned Hall left

I wish I had dared tell him for the second time that day what I did think on the subject, but I denied myself such frankness.

Anyway, men are just stupid, faithful children—some of them faithful, I mean.

I felt that if I stood there talking with the Crag any longer I might grow pedagogical and teach him a few things, so I sent him home across the road. I knew all six women would stay awake until they heard him lock them in, come down to the lodge and lock his own door.

It is very unworthy of me to enjoy his playing a watchdog of tradition across the road to an emancipated woman like myself. The situation both keeps me awake and puts me to sleep, and it is sweet, though I don't know why.

God never made anything more wonderful than a good man—even a stupid one. Lights out!

CHAPTER VIII.

Man and the Asafetida Spoon.

I DO wish the great man who is discovering how to put people into some sort of metaphysical pickle that will suspend their animations until he gets ready to wake them up would hurry up with his investigations, so he can catch Sallie before she begins to fade or wilt. Sallie, just as she is, brought to life about five generations from now would cause a sensation.

Some women are so feminine that they are sticky unless well spiced with deviltry. Sallie's loveliness hasn't much seasoning. Still, I do love her dearly, and I am just as much her slave as are any of the others. I can't get out of it.

"Do you suppose we will ever get all of the clothes done for the twins?" Nell sighed gently as we sat on my porch whipping yards of lace upon white ruffles and whipping up our own spirits at the same time. Everybody in Glendale sews for Sallie's children, and it takes her all her time to think up the clothes.

"Never," I answered.

"She's coming, and I do believe she has got more of this ruffling. I see it floating down her skirt," Nell fairly groaned.

Nell ought to like to sew. She isn't emancipated enough to hate a needle as I do. But the leaven is working, and she's rising slowly. It might be well for some man to work the dough down a little before she runs over the pan. That's a primitively feminine wish and not at all in accordance with my own advanced ideas.

I was becoming slightly snarled with my thread, and I was glad when Sallie and her sweetness seated itself in the best rocker in the softest breeze, which Nell had vacated for her.

ature. "Don't you all 'spose God made the sun some to heat up kit's stomach?" he demanded scornfully as she grabbed the little roly-poly bone of contention and marched off with her to finish dressing her on the front porch in the direct rays of her instituted heater.

The household at large at Widegables can never agree on the clothing of the twins, and Henrietta often has to finish their toilets thus, by force. Aunt Dilsie being reduced by her phthisis to a position that is almost entirely ornamental, Henrietta's strength of character is the only thing that has made the existence of the twins bearable to themselves or other people.

As I have said before, I do wish that some day in the future you will come under the direct rays of Henrietta's influence, Jane, dear.

"Yes, Sallie, I should call them a responsibility," I answered her, with a laugh, as I reached up my arms for the kitten. Then, as the little yellow head snuggled in the hollow that was instituted in the beginning between a woman's breast and arms for the purpose of just such nestlings, I whispered as I laid my lips against her little ear, "and a happiness, too, darling."

And as Sallie rocked and recuperated her breath Nell eyed the ruffle apprehensively.

"Are you going to let us make another dress for the kiddies, Sallie, dear?" she finally was forced by her uneasiness to ask, though with the deepest sweetness and consideration in her voice.

If I am ever a widow with young children I hope they will burn us all up with the deceased rather than keep me wrapped in a cotton wool of sympathy, as all of us do, Sallie.

"It's lovely of you, Nell, to want to do more for the babies after all the beautiful things you and Evelina have made them, and I may be able to get another white dress apiece for them after I give Cousin James the bills that are awful already, but this is some ruffling that I just forced Mamie Hall to let me bring up to you girls to do for her baby. The poor little dear is two months old, and Mamie is just beginning on his little dress for him. He has been wearing the plainest lit-entirely alone with that squirming baby that looks exactly like him when it is having a terrible spell of colic and Ned is in the midst of a sick headache, with all the other children cold, hungry and cross, the cook gone to a funeral and the nurse in a grouch because she couldn't go and—and he knowing that Mamie was attired in a lovely, cool muslin dress, sitting up here on the porch with us sipping a mint julep and smoking a ten cent cigar, resting and getting up an appetite for supper. I want him to have about five years of such days, and then he would deserve the joys of parenthood that he now does not appreciate."

"Oh, Mamie wouldn't smoke a cigar!" was the exclamation that showed how much Sallie got of the motif of my eruption.

Diplomacy.

Billy was sending out invitations to his birthday party.

"I don't think I would mention the birthday," advised his mother. "It looks so much like asking for a present."

To this Billy demurred violently, but was finally persuaded to yield the point. For a long time he thought deeply. Then, solving the problem, he asked:

"Well, mother, we won't say anything about the birthday, but don't you think that we might put the picture of a cake with candles at the top of the paper?"

MAKING UMBRELLAS.

The Work of Assembling the Frames and Putting on Covers.

In most umbrella factories the task of turning out ribs and stems is left to other factories making a specialty of those parts. These are sent to the manufacturer, and the man whose work it is to assemble the parts inserts a bit of wire into the small holes at the end of the ribs, draws them together about the main rod and adjusts the ferrule.

In cutting the cloth or silk seventy-five thicknesses or thereabouts are arranged upon a table at which skilled operators work. In one department there are girls who operate hemming machines. A thousand yards of hemmed goods is a day's work for one of these girls. The machines doing this job attain a speed of some 3,000 revolutions a minute. After the hemming has been done the cloth or silk is cut into triangular pieces with a knife, as before, but with a pattern laid upon the cloth. The next operation is the sewing of the triangular pieces together by machinery.

The covers and frames are now ready to be brought together. In all there are twenty-one places where the cover is to be attached to the frame. The handle is next glued on, and the umbrella is ready for pressing and inspection.

VALUE OF EARTHWORM.

It Produces the Richest Kind of Top Dressing.

One of the important soil builders is the earthworm, according to R. L. Throckmorton, assistant professor of soils in the Kansas Agricultural college.

"Its greatest importance lies in the fact that by burrowing into the soil it leaves open passages through which the elements of weathering may gain access to the subsoil or underlying layers of stone," says Mr. Throckmorton. "Water and air are the two main factors that bring about the decay of rocks, and both of these are found in abundance in the channels of the earthworm."

"On digging down in most soils a labyrinth of angleworm channels will be found, some of them going to a depth of six or seven feet. This is especially true of tenacious soils, where they are most abundant. Worms are scarce in light, sandy soils."

"In making channels the worm swallows the dirt to secure the decayed vegetable matter it contains. As it passes through the worm the soil is ground much in the same manner that grain is ground in the chicken's gizzard and is made very fine."

"Charles Darwin estimated that angleworms in England deposited one-fifth of an inch of fine soil over the entire acre surface each year. This is the richest kind of top dressing. He estimated that there are approximately 50,000 worms to the acre of garden soil and 25,000 to the acre of meadow soil, and there is no reason why there are not just as many worms in American soil as in English soil."

A Diplomatist.

"I am amazed, sir, that you should propose to my daughter. You have not known her a week."

CRIMSON CLOVER SEED.

Samples of lots of crimson clover seed now on the market tested recently by the United States department of agriculture usually have contained about a third of dead seed and in many samples more than two-thirds of the seed was dead. It is important, therefore, that farmers know the quality of the crimson clover seed they intend to sow.

Every lot of seed should be tested for germination, and then seeded heavily enough to insure getting a stand. If the present supply of seed of low germination is sowed without testing and at a usual rate of seeding 6 poor stands and failures will follow even under favorable weather conditions.

HEAT IN THE SILO.

Temperature Never High Except on the Surface.

[C. H. Eckles, Missouri station.]

Every one who has used a silo has observed that at times the silage becomes hot. This is generally noticed on the surface during mild weather as when the silage is being fed in rather small quantities. Many have supposed that the entire mass of silage becomes very hot and that a certain amount of heat is necessary to preserve it. Agents of various types of silos have also taken advantage of the lack of general information on this subject to make claims for or against certain types of silo on the ground that the temperature of the silage is influenced by the particular construction.

The Missouri experiment station decided two years ago to get the facts. Electric thermometers were placed in silos to take the temperature. A bulb was placed in the silo during filling at any point where it was desirable to take the temperature. This bulb had wires leading to the outside of the silo so the temperature could be taken with an electrical device at any time. Temperature readings were taken near the center of the silage mass and at the wall at frequent intervals during two seasons in from eight to ten silos, including stave, iron, tile, Gurler and concrete.

It was found that the temperature in the depth of the silage is never high as is so often thought. After filling the temperature rises from 5 to 10 degrees the first few days and then slowly declines during the fall and winter until it reaches the lowest point, about 40 degrees, in March. In good silage the temperature seldom goes more than a few degrees, if any, above 100 F. and may not go above 90. The only high temperatures found are at the surface when the air comes in contact with silage. Furthermore, a temperature much above 100 means loss of silage, as some of the material is being actually burned to make the heat. Mold will raise the temperature some. Corn put in the silo in a mature condition develops more heat than that put in green. No relation was found between the material used in the construction of the silo and the temperature of the silage. Practically no dif-

THE NATIONAL HIGHWAY

Hon. Mr. Rogers Promises Support to Great Scheme.

The members of the executive of the Canadian Automobile Association had a conference recently with Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, on the building of a transcontinental highway from coast to coast. L. B. Howland, president Canadian Automobile Association, Toronto, urged Mr. Rogers with the necessity for the construction of the transcontinental road. He said it would open up undiscovered country. He referred to how the railroad had been the means of discovering Cobalt mines. He pointed out that the Province of Quebec had constructed a road to the boundary and that the Ontario Government were considering plans for a trans-provincial highway. A. L. Caron, Montreal, president of the Automobile Club of Canada, reminded Mr. Rogers of the great development that had come to be made in the Province of Quebec by the building of good roads. He said that Quebec had two thousand miles of improved macadam roads now. The country had prospered since the building of the roads as never before. He told of meeting Senator Marshall of New York State, who had told him that an expenditure of $100,000,000 in New York State on good roads had resulted in real estate being increased in value by $300,000,000.

Mr. Rogers said the views of the delegation had his entire sympathy. He said not only would the construction of a road be a good thing for the country, but it was a national necessity. To his mind it was the one outstanding undertaking to take up after the war. It would be the means of providing work for many who came back from the war and wished for some outdoor occupation. It would also be the means of enabling the Government to hold out prospects of work to immigrants. He would support the transcontinental highway with all his power, both in Parliament and before the people.

He said he was satisfied great numbers of American tourists would be attracted to Canada by the construction of the highway. The money they would spend would make the building of the road an economical practicability. Mr. Howland assured Mr. Rogers of the fullest support of the motorists of Canada to the project.

Mr. Rogers said he would be glad of their assistance. He did not think the construction of the road would necessarily be expensive. He said it would go through the north country to Winnipeg and for a good part of the way could follow the railroad tracks. He said there were many places where new tracks had been laid down and the old ones were now idle. These old grades could be utilized for the highway which could be built over it.

Afterwards the delegation went to see Dr. Coulter, Deputy Postmaster-General. They asked him to do something in connection with the dangerous way rural mail boxes were placed on the highways. Many of them were so far out in the road as to make traffic dangerous. Dr. Coulter promised to look into the complaint. Another matter to which the Deputy Postmaster-General's attention was drawn was that few towns in Canada had the name of the town posted on the post-offices.

A GOOD MUSHROOM

Tested Ways of Preserving Tasty Tomato, to Say Nothing of Other Savory Relishes Dishes and Boston Baked

Ketchup time is here, and hooves the good housewife to some of this appetizer. For ketchup take half a peck of tomatoes and wipe them well, place on dishes and season with a half pound of salt. Leave twenty-four hours, drain the juice through a hair sieve into a pan. Add a dozen small capsciums and lots, or, if not at hand, two whole pepper and four table spoons of onion juice. Simmer for one hour and then add the tomatoes which have been pulped through a sieve.

Cook for thirty minutes in a double boiler, cork and seal.

Take half a large sieveful of walnut shells and place in a wooden tub with a half bushel of coarse salt. Beat and mash the shells to time for six days. Drain the juice into a pan and to mash the shells until a pulp is extracted. Strain the liquid through a fine sieve and serve in a pan and simmer gently; then add two ounces of ginger, two ounces of allspice, one ounce of whole pepper, a half clove and simmer all gently for about one hour. Measure an equal quantity of spice bottle, then fill with the liquid and seal thoroughly and keep until lowing year.

To one peck of good, so mushrooms allow a half bushel of coarse salt. Break up and stand three hours, and then drain once or twice a day for three days. Pour the mash into a stone jar for each quart one ounce of salt. Place a weighted plate on the jar and the jar in a tub of water. Bring it to a boil and simmer it for thirty minutes. Strain off the liquid and next day add a spoonful of brandy to each quart and let it stand in a cool place twenty-four hours. Strain it through a fine sieve and bottle, and be careful not to get the dregs. Then cork and seal.

Wonderful Hand Weaving In Mexico.

The hand woven blankets made by the Indian girls of Mexico, to whom a dime a day is a good wage, although they begin work at sunrise and labor until sunset, are the admiration and despair of all who appreciate fine handiwork or value perfect color combinations. A small blanket bought in Mexico City five years ago, although it has been used as a wall tapestry ever since, seems as bright in every one of its rainbow colors as on the day it was bought. The weaving is so perfect that it has no right or wrong side.—National Geographic Magazine.

Not So Exacting.

"Are you in favor of an eight hour working day?"

"I don't go quite so strong as that," replied Farmer Cornstossel. "If my boy Josh was to work three hours a day two days in succession I'd think he was doin' purty good."—Washington Star.

Of all overworked women probably the housewife is the hardest worked. She has so much to attend to, with very little help. Her work can be lightened if she knows the value of system and she should try and take a short rest in the daytime. A physician who became famous almost around the world, Doctor Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., the specialist in woman's diseases, for many years practiced medicine in a farming district. He there observed the lack of system in the planning of the work.

If it is a headache, a backache, a sensation of irritability or twitching and uncontrollable nervousness, something must be wrong with the head or back, a woman naturally says, but all the time the real trouble very often centers in the organs. In nine cases out of ten the seat of the difficulty is here, and a woman should take rational treatment for its cure. The disorder should be treated steadily and systematically with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

For diseases from which women suffer "Favorite Prescription" is a powerful restorative. During the last fifty years it has banished from the lives of tens of thousands of women the pain, worry, misery and distress caused by these diseases.

If you are a sufferer, get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in liquid or tablet form to-day. Then address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and get confidential medical advice entirely free.

Practically no difference in the freezing of the silage on the wall was observed with the different kinds of silos.

Rack For Sunning Milk Cans.

Cleanliness is a very vital factor in the successful production of milk. The illustration shows a simple sunning rack for milk cans and utensils. Any farmer can quickly construct this rack. All you need is a few 2 by 4 and 1 by 4. The framework is of 2 by 4 and the braces are 1 by 4. The cut shows an end view and the length will depend on the number of cans and utensils to be sunned. The rack should be adjustable to the direct rays of the sun. This is accomplished by the use of an iron bolt in securing the horizontal pieces at their intersection, with the upright 2 by 4 forming the pedestal. For clean milk cans, wash first in cold water, then steam (or scald, if steam is not available), then use the sun rack.—Farm Progress.

FERTILIZING PASTURES.

During a recent series of experiments conducted by the Ohio experiment station in Washington county the use of phosphorus, lime and manure was found profitable in fertilizing pasture land, while nitrogen and potassium made no noticeable showing. Fertilizing elements were used alone and in combination and were compared with manure. $2 worth being used to the acre. Lime was applied in a few cases.

More white clover and less poverty grass grew on plots treated with acid phosphate and manure than on the others. Clover grew more profusely where lime was applied. Nitrogen caused a more luxuriant growth immediately after treatment, but its effect was not lasting. The use of potassium was unprofitable.

Stacking Clover.

Clover left in the windrow overnight and turned once or twice the following forenoon is ready for the stack or the mow the second afternoon after cutting. If the weather looks rainy it should be placed in cocks, covered well and left for some time. It is best to open the cocks and permit them to air awhile before taking to the stack.

Visit to the Trenches.

The Canadian journalists recently visited one of the great British bases where the troops are received and trained for the front. At every place the Canadians were spoken of in the highest terms. The Canadians are the best-dressed, best-behaved troops, the commandant says. They may not be as smart, but in essentials they are as well trained as the famous Guards. A general from Winnipeg was highly spoken of and given much credit by the Imperial officers for this. In a recent demonstration put on for a big general the commandant told the officers in charge of the departments that they could pick their men from all troops, but they must have the best. Thirteen instructors chose the Canadians, thirteen out of sixteen in a great Imperial camp. All the instructors were Imperials. It was remarkable that crime among the Canadians is the same as at Storncliffe, less than one-tenth of one per cent.

The correspondents also visited the Canadian convalescent home for officers at Dieppe. This hospital, run by Toronto women, is doing splendid work. Mrs. Christopher Robinson, the superintendent, was laid to rest, and Mrs. Foster is acting superintendent. The sisters included Misses Chadwick, Gault, Burnham, Murphy, and others of Toronto. Mrs. J. E. W. Ross is chairman of the Toronto committee. Like the Perkins Bull Hospital at Putney, London, the hospital fills an urgent want and is very popular.

Cultivate the Orchard.

[C. W. Rapp, Oklahoma station.]

During past years dry seasons have spelled disaster for many of the fruit growers of Oklahoma. Due to careless methods of farming, the orchards were allowed to grow up in weeds. These utilized much of the moisture, and the long dry spells evaporated most of the rest. Fruit either dried up or fell or was too small and bitter for any practical use. In many cases the trees died.

The neglect during the one dry year caused the loss of orchards that had been built up during many years. Thorough orchard cultivation is the only successful method of combating the effects of a dry spell. Good and thorough tillage will keep down all weeds and will form a good dust mulch, which will largely prevent evaporation.

Clipping Pastures.

Clipping pastures after harvest was found to result in more and better grasses in a survey of the Ohio experiment station in the southeastern part of the state. The ripening of weed seeds is prevented, and briars are removed, so that clover and blue grass may occupy the ground. Usually there are only a few places in the pasture where a mowing machine cannot be used. In such cases the scythe is brought into play.

Alfalfa and Dampness.

If possible cut alfalfa when there is no moisture on it in the form of dew or rain. Outside moisture is much harder to get rid of than inside sap, and when present it spoils the hay quicker than merely being put up green does.

FOXES AND SHEEP.

Once upon a time, so long ago that no one even remembers the year, there were no foxes in Iceland, but plenty of sheep—nice woolly sheep living on every farm in the country.

It happened that a man from Iceland was obliged to go to Finland to spend an entire winter there in attending to some business affairs.

Neils was a most attractive young man and every one liked him. Indeed, so very handsome and attractive was he that a wicked old witch fell quite in love with him and wanted to marry him.

Neils, however, had a sweetheart at home and had no mind to give her up for any one, and politely, but firmly, refused to marry the Finnish witch,
and as soon as springtime came home he went, in spite of all the entreaties of the witch.

Of course she was very, very ugly and determined to be revenged on Neils.

"Very well, my fine Neils," she said, shaking her fist after the ship that was bearing him away. "I'll see that you will regret all your days the slight you have put upon me!"

So the witch made every effort to think of a plan to punish the insensible Icelander and at last hit upon a most ingenious and wicked one.

She took two foxes and repeated so many charms and incantations over them that they were completely bewitched and ready to obey all her commands.

Taking them down to the seashore
she put them on board a ship bound for Iceland.

"Go!" she ordered, "to that land in which cold hearted men live and destroy the first living thing you meet and ever after all others of the same kind!"

Now the cruel witch was sure the first living things the foxes would meet would be the owners of the ship waiting at the landing place to meet it, coming in, and she intended that the foxes should destroy all the people on the island, Neils himself being among them.

As it chanced, however, a sheep that had strayed away from the fold had wandered down to the waterside, and when the bewitched foxes sprang ashore the sheep was directly in their path.

So the poor sheep was sacrificed and the foxes remaining multiplied.

and advocates a tepid bath every day.
Exercise, she urges, also can be indulged in to the point of fatigue, and taken in excess does more harm than good.

When the eyes are heavy and dull it is frequently due to overstrain or internal disorders. Then the liver or kidneys are not functioning properly, the eyeballs are yellowish, and of course this calls for internal correc-tives. Eye strain frequently causes redness and swelling of the lids and bloodshot to appear. Exposure to heat and cold will also cause similar results.

Eyes that are bright and animated, direct in their gaze, usually indicate a healthy body—one of the most beautifully expressive of all nature's gifts.
The contrary concludes disorders of the body or eye, frequently a complication of these. The care and attention bestowed upon the eyes will assuredly prolong not only their invaluable service, but their beauty as well.

PONCHO SWEATERS.

Something New In Lines For the Sport Girl.

There is a new kind of sweater called the poncho. It's a straight piece of fine colored wool, with an oblong opening at the neck, each two selvages caught at the waist line under the arm with an ornamental band. These selvages as well as the opening at the neck are ornamented with brilliant Indian embroidery.

These sweaters hang in a straight line back and front, and the width of the material is so wisely chosen that it does not extend more than an inch over the top of the arms.

In choosing one be quite sure that it is small enough. Its smart air is instantly obliterated if it is too wide across the chest and falls limply below the shoulders.

Ham Loaf.

Soak half a tablespoonful of granulated gelatin in one and one-half tablespoonfuls of cold water, then dissolve this in a small cupful of boiling water. Pour this over a large cupful of chopped boiled ham. Stand the dish in a pan of cold water and stir the mixture until it begins to thicken.
Fold in one cupful of cream that has been beaten thick and a few grains of paprika. Mold in a ring mold. At serving time turn the preparation from the mold, cut in slices and serve with or without mayonnaise.

Corn Pudding.

Place in an earthen jar a pint of corn, one cupful of sweet milk, one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of sugar, two well beaten eggs, salt and pepper to taste. Beat the eggs thoroughly. Place corn in baking dish, add the milk mixture and bake a golden brown.

Mother Goose Pantomime.

"Mother Goose" rimes written line by line on separate slips of paper may be shuffled and handed to players, instructions being given that those receiving the same poem lines shall find each other and stay together. After all the groups have been formed each
group can dramatize the little jingle
they have been given and let the others guess it. Care should be taken

TOO BUSY TO EAT.

What Happened to the Man Who Thought Only of Making Money.

Once upon a time there was a man
so busy to eat.

In the morning he swallowed a cupful of coffee and smeared half a soft boiled egg on his mustache, where he could lick it off on his way downtown in the cars.

At noon he allowed himself fifteen minutes for luncheon, and as it takes the average waiter longer than that to walk to the kitchen and back, the fifteen minutes was about all the nourishment he got.

He usually got home late for dinner in the evening, because he hated to tear himself away from his place of business so long as there was the slightest possibility of making another nickel before he closed down his desk, and when he did sit down to the table
he devoured the stock market reports in the evening paper instead of digging into the fodder.

He couldn't see any sense in wasting his time on food while there was so much money in the world that did not belong to him.

At the age of forty he died of what the doctors called acute indigestion, but I know better. It was just plain starvation.

Anyhow, he left his family well provided for.

The moral is: Perhaps it was all for the best.

LEGEND OF ABRAHAM.

The Story of the Weary Old Stranger Points a Moral.

The patriarch Abraham sat at the door of his tent. It was evening, when if any strangers passed by he asked them to enter his tent. Soon he saw an old man approaching, bent and weary with travel.

Abraham rose and asked the old man into his tent. He washed his feet, gave him the best seat and bade him enter the tent. The old man ate his supper without offering a prayer of thanks.

"Why don't you worship God of heaven?" asked Abraham.

"I worship fire only," said the stranger. "I know no other God."

At that Abraham became angry and drove the man out into the night.

Then God called Abraham and said:
"Where is the stranger that was in your tent?"

"I thrust him out because he did not worship thee," said Abraham.

Then God answered:
"I have suffered him these hundred years, although he did not honor me, and couldst thou not endure him one night when he gave thee no trouble?"

Abraham was then ashamed of himself, and he sent for the old man, invited him into his tent and made him rest there until morning.

The View From an Aeroplane.

It is a great surprise to the uninitiated to see how uniform the surface of the earth appears when viewed from a great altitude. Although individual objects are hard to identify,
such things as rivers, lakes and railroads are easily recognized by their contour, direction or some slight individuality or characteristic which can

One Chic Way to Make

The king of American designers just came out with this model, which is

with a pointed cape collar and skirt yoke. The snug sleeves are really buttoned to the elbow. A gayly bead-ed bag of gray velvet is also smart.

HOW TO REST.

The Value of Perfect Relaxation For Fatigued Bodies.

Every woman should learn to rest if she wishes to preserve her good looks.
Should she lead a very busy life she must acquire the habit of availing herself of every few spare moments for this purpose. Analyze the art of relaxation.

Hang the arms loosely at the sides and then begin to move them slowly backward and forward from side to side. Then open the fingers wide and shake the hands loosely from the wrists, and after this practice the same exercise with legs and feet.

each other and stay together. After
all the groups have been formed each
group can dramatize the little jingle
they have been given and let the
others guess it. Care should be taken to select rimes that will lend themselves easily to dramatization.

A Youthful Soil Tiller.

sowed; he is determined to plant. Last spring he either forgot about gardening, or else he was enjoying himself in some other way more to his liking.
Anyhow, he is at it, and a very fine looking young farmer he is.

EARLY RAILROAD FLIERS.

When the Threat of Twelve Miles an Hour Was Called Nonsense.

When the first passenger railroad ever built was opened in England in 1825 the train traveled from one end of the line to the other, a distance of twelve miles, in two hours. And Wood, one of the best known writers on the subject of railroads at that day, wrote
as follows:

"Nothing can do more harm to the adoption of railways than the promulgation of such nonsense as that we shall see locomotives traveling at the rate of twelve miles an hour."

Today, with locomotives traveling at the rate of seventy-five miles an hour, one can look at Wood's warning with a feeling of amusement.

In 1829 a locomotive was introduced in this country, and in the following year Peter Cooper experimented with a locomotive on the B. and O. railroad.
The flues of the boiler were made from gun barrels. The boiler was about the size of a flour barrel.

Cooper related with considerable satisfaction how on the trial trip of this wonderful engine he passed a gray horse attached to a wagon.

dividual objects are hard to identify,
such things as rivers, lakes and railroads are easily recognized by their
contour, direction or some slight individuality or characteristic which can readily be shown upon a map, especially if the maps are made or corrected by men who fly above the earth and get an accurate and literal birds-eye view of its surface. Objects which seem to loom up with the greatest clearness to one standing on the surface of the earth appear very different and quite insignificant when viewed from above, while a patch of colored soil which would not be noticed at all by a person standing on the ground is a most valuable landmark to the air sailor.

Dropping the Aspirate.

The English derivatives from the Latin "lacryma," writes a correspondent, are practically always spelt with the "h" nowadays. In most modern dictionaries the older and more accurate form is marked as obsolete. But in the particular case of "lachryma-tory" there is some warrant for the "h," for the word is directly derived from the low Latin "lachrymatorium," which has the "h." The lachrymatorium, a glass vessel prettily but inaccurately supposed to contain the tears of mourners for the dead, was really a receptacle for perfumes or ointments.
"Lachrymatory," used as an adjective, is quite new and quite unnecessary.
Why can't we be content with "lachrymal?"—London Chronicle.

Why the Head of a Lion.

A custom there is in most parts of Europe to adorn aqueducts, spouts and cisterns with lions' heads, which, though no illaudable ornament, is of an Egyptian genealogy, who practiced the same under a symbolical filiation.
For because the sun being in Leo, the flood of Nilus was at the full and water became conveyed into every part, they made the spouts of their aque-ducts through the head of a lion.—Sir Thomas Browne, "Vulgar Errors."

Might Be Done.

"A man should never talk about what he does not understand."

"Well," replied Senator Sorghum,
"sometimes he can get away with it, if he is dead sure his audience doesn't understand it either."—Washington Star.

A rather unique gathering assembled at the home of Norman Moore, Glen Buell, on Sunday, being the celebration of the diamond wedding of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Denison, Napanee, who were guests in their home at the time. Mr. and Mrs. Denison have enjoyed the privilege of raising a family of six children, all of whom were living at the time of their anniversary, and all of whom were present except one whose home is in the west.

On Monday, November 27th, after several months of patient suffering, H. P. Claringbold, Bath, passed away at the home of his son-in-law, E. R. Sills, Sandhurst. The deceased was born near Walmer Castle, Kent, England in 1837. At the age of twenty, he married Susannah Ames of Dover, Kent. The married couple came to Canada in 1857, and settled by the Bay of Quinte near Conway and lived within a radius of six miles for sixty years. Deceased leaves a wife and eight children, Mrs. Ira White, Moose Jaw, Sask.; Mrs. Joseph Mills and Mrs. W. E. Conway, Peterboro; Mrs. A. P. Young, Bath; Mrs. E. R. ### Adolphustown Doctor Dead.

Dr. Dorland, a well known resident of Adolphustown community, passed away very suddenly Sunday of apoplexy. Dr. Dorland graduated from McGill College in 1875, practiced in Milwaukee and Chicago several years, and returned to Adolphustown in 1905. Besides practicing medicine, Dr. Dorland was a successful farmer and owned the best farm in the township. He leaves a widow, Catharine Dorland, a daughter, Gwendolen Dorland, and James P. Dorland, an only son, who enlisted and sailed with the first contingent. Dr. Dorland was sixty-five years of age, an Anglican, and in politics was a staunch Conservative.

OBITUARY.

Two of the oldest and most respected residents of Sheffield, Mr. and Mrs. James Murphy, passed peacefully away on Wednesday, Dec. 6th, within a few hours of each other. James Murphy was a son of the late Richard and Mary Murphy, who predeceased him about forty-five years ago. The deceased gentleman was born in County Carlow, Ireland, and with his parents came to Canada when eleven years old. On January 13th, 1863, he married Maria Finn, of Haverford, a daughter of Thomas and Maria Finn, of the County Sligo, Ireland. James Murphy was eighty-seven years of age, and Mrs. Murphy was seventy-three years old. They leave to mourn their loss six sons and three daughters, all of whom attended the double funeral on Saturday morning to the Roman Catholic church, Erinsville, where a solemn requiem high mass was offered by Rev. Father Carey. Those survive them: Mrs. John Townsend, Mrs. Daniel O'Connell and Hugh, of Watertown, N.Y.; John of Depew, N. Y.; Dominic, Richard and Margaret, of Kingston; Thomas, of Sheffield, and James at home. A large concourse of relatives and friends, some coming from a long distance, gathered at their late residence as a witness of the high esteem they had won from the people all over the district.

The Red Cross Society

The Bazaar given on Saturday by the Red, White and Blue Club, was a pronounced success. The Hall was beautifully decorated and the different booths were gay in coloring. Later in the afternoon, the many lights threw a soft radiance over what was indeed a brilliant scene.

The Midway was perhaps the greatest attraction where the younger girls gave an enjoyable performance, while those in charge of the Tea Room were kept busy serving the many guests. The booths also were well patronized.

The Red Cross feel deeply indebted to the members of the Club and to all who gave them assistance. The net proceeds amounted to over $70.

On the evening of December 22nd, these young workers will give an entertainment in the Armouries. A beautiful gold watch, donated by Messrs. F. Chinneck and Son, and for which tickets have been sold, will be raffled.

The Curlers have kindly invited the ladies of our Society to serve afternoon tea on New Year's Day, at the opening of the new Curling Rink and Club House. The ladies have accepted the invitation, which they greatly appreciate.

We acknowledge with thanks a donation of socks from Mrs. Briden and one of pillows and mouth-wipes from Mrs. Allison.

The Hall will be open all day Saturday and in the afternoon tea will be served. But on Saturday, Dec.
 23rd, the afternoon meeting will be postponed, the Hall being open only in the morning.
